GET READY FOR THE CHASE

SPECIAL TRAIN FOR HUNTERS

The open season for hunting deer and moose in Northern Ontario is rapidly approaching. South of the French and Mattawa rivers, Nov. 5th to Nov. 20th inclusive; north and west of these rivers, Oct. 25th to Nov. 30th inclusive. North of the Transcontinental Railway line the season is from Sept. 15th to Nov. 15th inclusive.

The Canadian National Railways traverse the finest hunting territory in this country. This fact, with their special and regular train service, makes "The National Way" the premier line for the hunters. The hunting grounds are so vast there is game for everyone.

The selection of grounds is a most important matter and one which requires careful study. The territory reached by the Canadian National lines north of Parry Sound is already a favorite one, but that portion being composed of west of Capreol is as yet comparatively little known to the hunter, and, therefore, should be highly attractive to the followers of the deer and moose.

The Canadian National Railways are providing special train service, which with regular trains will meet all demands. Special trains will be operated as follows: Leave Toronto Union Station 11.15 p.m., Oct. 31st, for Capreol and intermediate points, and 11.15 p.m., Nov. 2nd, 3rd and 4th, for Key Act. and intermediate points. The usual ample accommodation of sleeping cars, baggage cars and coaches will be provided.

The Annual Hunters' Leaflet issued by the Canadian National Railways is now ready for distribution, and may be obtained on application to any agent of the Company, or write General Passenger Department, Room 607, Royal Bank Bldg., Toronto. 46-c

MANY VALUABLE PRIZES !

For The Express Great Circulation Drive

Make your start to-day in the big drive—Fifteen Valuable Prizes to be given the most willing and active Contestants—Big Free Vote in every paper the feature of the Drive.

Drive Officially Opened Saturday, Nov. 4th

Nominate yourself or a friend to-day.—Start now.—Receipt Book and full information for asking.—Call, 'phone, or write Express Office.—Save the Free Voting Coupons, they have a big value.—Everyone can vote.—Vote for someone to-day.

The Big Circulation Drive announced by The Express last week is making rapid progress. The interest already shown is indeed very gratifying to the management, and the success of reaching the goal of 2000 new subscribers, and the payment of back due subscriptions is assured.

Many ladies in the towns and in the country, comprising twenty-eight rural routes, have been selected to put the drive over. The valuable prizes and many cash awards offered for the most votes, is a golden opportunity that is not being overlooked by most of the ladies, and the start in this big free-for-all has just begun. The collecting of votes is a pleasant task and will require only little of the spare time of those who will take an active part in the drive. Everyone will secure a prize or cash award. Everybody gets something.

The Free Voting Coupon is good for 7,500 votes if sent to the office on or before the date of expiration. This week's coupon is good for 45,000 votes. Saturday, November 25th, the coupon will be worth 22,500 votes, and the expiration date will be advanced two weeks in each case, ahead of the date of publication. All papers will contain a coupon good for votes, that can be voted for any one and there is no limit to the number of coupon votes that can be given to one contestant. No papers will be sold in bulk. The coupon must be clipped from a subscriber's paper, or those papers sent to prospective subscribers. More than Eighteen Million Votes are cast in this week's paper. Enough votes to win the Chevrolet Car.

Votes are also issued for payment of subscriptions from old subscribers paying back dues, or in advance, as well as for new subscriptions, and many subscriptions are going to be paid during the drive. The votes are going to some one. They have a big value, so get your share of them. The most votes will win.

The new, famous Chevrolet Touring Car, the latest and most modern model manufactured by the Chevrolet Motors, and sold by C. A. Wiseman, Napanee, for $785.00 is the first prize, to go

DESERONTO

The total catch of fish is reported at thirty tons, twenty-five tons of which was handled by one firm of buyers. The fish were shipped in special express cars that are set off for packing. The price still remains 5c. per lb.

The young lads employees of the match factory and glass works together with their gentlemen escorts, to the number of thirty-two, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bassett, Thomas street, and tendered a kitchen shower to Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Thompson, a charming young couple who were married on the 18th of July last, but left immediately for Lockport, N. Y., where Mr. Thompson was employed in his father's grocery. Recently they returned for a visit with friends and the mother of the bride who gave the friends and associates of the bride to whom these showers, which they did in a splendid and enthusiastic manner. Many beautiful presents of glassware, silverware and linen were given to the bride, and the party enjoyed themselves immensely at dancing and cards, after which a dainty lunch was served. James Marsele and Mrs. J. Maracle furnished the right kind of music for which an occasion and it all was enjoyed until 2 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Thompson, Deseronto road, entertained the children of School section No. 1 with a Hallowe'en party last Tuesday evening. Games and a dainty supper was the order for the hour.

Frank Bruyea, Maynooth, is visiting with friends and relatives in town. Mr. Bruyea is an old-time resident of Deseronto.

C. Kellar, reeve of Richmond township, has rented his farm to Percy Rose who will take possession in the spring. Mr. Rose is carrying on the fall ploughing on his farm at present.

Thos. Dowling, Deseronto road, has completed a cement foundation for a new barn which he will build across the road from his farm residence in the spring.

Miss Lewella Proctor, who entered Cobourg hospital as a nurse-in-training some few weeks ago, has arrived home again owing to sickness.

Miss Pearl Cassels, Kingston, and Miss Valleria Miss Henderson motored to Trenton recently and visited their aunt, Mrs. Jas. Donaldson.

Mr. Steele and family have moved into their new house on Thomas street, recently purchased from Mr. Thompson.

Your tomatoes can't spoil if you use WALLACE'S Preserving Powder.—10c. a box.

The schooner Lyman Davis brought in a load of coal for Mr. P. Gleeson on Friday last.

Messrs Irwin Sexsmith and F. H. Armitage will hold a sale of live stock on Thursday, Nov. 23.

Mr. Thompson has purchased the Sand Hill farm from the estate of the late John Gunn. The Gunn homestead has been purchased by Mr. Enos Pringle.

STELLA

The W.M.S., of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Amherst Island, held its annual thanksgiving meeting on October 25th, at the home of Mrs. H. Saunders, Stella, for the routine of business. Several short readings were given, one of particular interest bearing on thanksgiving, "Mrs. Osborne's Awakening," by Mrs. Edward Kilpatrick. A very generous thank-offering was handed in by the members. Plans were made to purchase new material to make garments for next year's bale. At the close of the meeting a dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

THE TRAFFIC IN HABIT-FORMING DRUGS

DR. J. G. SHEARER
Social Service Council of Canada.

Addiction to the use of habit-forming drugs such as opium, morphine and cocaine has assumed such large proportions, and been so difficult to suppress, and makes such terrible havoc, physical, mental and moral of its enslaved victims as to cause grave concern to leaders alike in church and state. Parliament is always unanimous in making the Opium and Narcotic Drugs Act more stringent and effective. The only question raised by members of Commons or Senate is how best to accomplish the end sought.

The present Premier, Right Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, then Minister of Labor, introduced the Act in 1911. It has been strengthened since under the Right Honourables Sir Robert Borden and Arthur Meighen, and last session under the Hon. H. S. Beland, Minister of Health. The penalty was raised to seven years. Whipping was added where drugs are supplied to juveniles, and unnaturalized aliens convicted of offences were ordered deported after serving sentence.

It is interesting to note the distribution of this traffic in the Provinces of the Dominion. The very latest figures supplied by the Federal Department of Health giving the numbers for Federal convictions for the year ending 31st March, 1922, are as follows :

	Total	Chinese	Non-Chinese
P. E. Island..	0	0	0
Nova Scotia..	9	8	1
New Brunsw'k	14	9	5
Manitoba.....	16	0	15
Ontario.....	66	52	14
Saskatchewan	88	73	15
Alberta.....	101	59	42
Quebec.....	237	133	104
Brit. Columbia	315	300	15
	845	634	211

We have arranged these figures in ascending scale.

The first fact that stares one in the face is the tremendous proportion of Chinese in this summary of offenders, 634 out of 845. The new law attaching deportation as a penalty will probably in a few years materially alter these figures. It is likely that many, perhaps most of the Chinese offenders are not Canadian citizens and are therefore subject to deportation when convicted. These must either mend their ways or leave Canada.

It is interesting to note that no mention is made of Japanese or East Indians in this statement.

It is sometimes argued by those opposed to prohibition of the traffic in intoxicants that it results in increased addiction to the use of drugs. These official figures effectively knock the props from under this contention. The two provinces not under prohibition show 552 convictions out of 845 for all Canada. If the "chinese are left out the figures are 119 in the two provinces out of 211 in all Canada.

I do not argue that prohibition lessens the use of drugs but that it certainly does put a clause in British Columbia's quota of 15, omitting the Chinese which are more numerous there than in any other part of Canada, is not abnormally large, being the same as Manitoba's and Saskatchewan's. But it is singular that in all the Western Provinces, leaving out the Chinese, the convictions are proportionately much larger than in Ontario and the Maritime Provinces. Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and British Columbia have 15 each and Alberta 42 ; Ontario 14, with a population of half a million more than the four combined.

The case of Quebec is also not easily explained. Two hundred and thirty seven, including Chinese, or 104 not including them, is abnormal. This is certainly not to be charged up to the French Canadians. Out of the 237 in that Province only 21 are outside Montreal, in an almost solid French population, and of these 24 only 11 are non-Chinese. This is highly creditable. Quebec outside Montreal. Montreal itself is the most perplexing. The Health Department's more complete report gives Montreal 213, including Chinese, or 93 without them, in a population of perhaps 750,000. Compare this with the figures for the whole of the Maritime Provinces, 25 including Chinese, or 6 without them, out of a population of 1,000,000. Also compare it again with Ontario convictions, 66 including Chinese, or 14 without them, out of a population of not less than 3,000,000.

This can hardly be explained by the cosmopolitan character of Montreal's population. Winnipeg, Vancouver, and other cities are quite as cosmopolitan in proportion to population as Montreal. And there is no finer type of population anywhere than the people of Montreal in general.

Montreal has had for many years an abnormally large and (at least negatively) tolerated colony of criminals, that is, commercialized social vice, as the reports of the Montreal Committee of Sixteen conclusively show.

Bearing in mind that social vice and narcotic drugs are twin evils and boon companions, each the cause and the effect of the other, is the explanation in whole or large part to be found in this fact.

Lunenburg, N.S.

In Lunenburg, the Gloucester of Nova Scotia, the smell of fish is in all and over all. Churches, fish flakes, during, fish-house bills, bold headlands, shipyards, skilled fishermen and a sightly fleet of fishing vessels, oxen and German-looking faces, fairs and names, are characteristics. The place was settled by Hessians back in George IV.'s time, and marked traces of the early settlers remain. The housewives are so neat that they even put lace curtains at the cellar and woodshed windows. A prodigious clanging of church bells goes on in Lunenburg every Sunday, for the place has many places of worship. From Lunenburg come some of the hardiest and most skilful mariners and fishermen in the world, while the fishing fleet and the vessels built here have a wide reputation.

CONTINUANCE OF HOG PRODUCTION

DEMANDS GRADING AND PAYMENT FOR QUALITY—NEW DEVELOPMENTS REQUIRE A CHANGE IN METHOD OF MARKETING.

The purchasing of hogs in Canada has passed through a great variety of methods in the development of the industry. In the early days there were no public stockyards and as centralized packing plants became established, it was necessary, in order to secure supplies, that they organize a system of gathering the hogs from the farmers and bring them to the plants. It also resulted in the establishing of packing plants at many points in the smaller towns and cities, convenient for the supply of hogs. Many of these plants still continue to operate and are a very important factor in the marketing of hogs. As public stockyards developed, packing plants became more centralized. This is especially true of the newer parts of Canada where, as in the West, nearly all the hogs are slaughtered at central marketing points.

During the period previous to the great railway development which took place at the time of the building of the Canadian Northern and Transcontinental lines, the Canadian export trade was a very important factor and the bacon hog was given special attention. With the building of the railways, the domestic trade became the important part of the business. The general expansion resulted in big immigration which overtook the surplus of hog production and turned the greater part of the industry into domestic trade. The character of the labor employed and the work done demanded a supply of rather heavy meats. This period was immediately followed by the Great War and the export trade again became very important but it differed greatly from the early export business in that owing to the demand for any kind of meat, no differentiation in type or of the bacon hog was possible. The combined effect of the periods of domestic expansion and war conditions was that the special type of hog suitable for the export trade, as well as the domestic trade of to-day, was largely lost sight of. The result has been that all types of hogs have been paid for on the same basis, regardless of quality.

To-day, however, conditions have greatly changed. The domestic trade caters largely to the urban population which does not want fat pork, and the export trade has become very discriminating in its requirements. The bacon type hogs are the hogs required for both the domestic and export trade and as the domestic market is limited, the expansion of the hog industry in Canada depends on the export market. It is essential that the production of the bacon type of hog be encouraged. This can only be accomplished by the payment of a premium for quality. This need was so great, that all interested in the development of the swine industry that a joint conference was called by the Federal Minister of Agriculture in the fall of 1921, which resulted in the establishing of official grades for hogs, and the passing of the hog grading regulations.

PARLIAMENTARY LETTER

The King administration faces its first test of strength since the election with confidence. In five constituencies of the Dominion the electors will next month voice their opinion of the success of the Mackenzie King government. And all signs point to a declaration of renewed confidence in the Prime Minister and his colleagues.

Writs for the holding of the five by-elections were issued last week-end. In issuing the writs so soon after the constituencies became vacant the government carried out the policy it had so consistently and vainly urged upon Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, namely, that vacancies in the representation should be filled as soon as possible after they occurred, and also, that wherever more than one seat was vacant effort should be made to hold all contests simultaneously rather than continue to disturbe the peace of the people by springing by-elections at odd times here, there and everywhere.

The government last week decided upon the issuing of writs and widely brought in all fights at the same time. Therefore, the electors of five constituencies will decide, on December 4th, who is to represent them in the House of Commons.

The vacancies are in Lanark, Ontario ; Jacques Cartier, and Megantic, Quebec ; Glouchester, New Brunswick ; and Halifax, Nova Scotia. The member for Glouchester figured in one of the most popular senatorial appointments which has been made in years. Mr. C. Turgeon, who has been in parliamentary life for twenty years, is known throughout the length and breadth of Canada as a staunch supporter of Liberal principles. One of the kindliest and most friendly gentlemen who ever graced a seat in the commons, Mr. Turgeon goes now to the Upper House to fill the vacancy created through the death of the late Senator Thompson. The Commoners will miss him, but his appointment will be a gain to the Senatorial side of the parliament.

Lucien T. Pacaud, former member for Megantic, Quebec, has been appointed Secretary of the Canadian High Commissioner's office in London. W. L. Griffiths, the present occupant of that position, has applied for superannuation, and until that becomes effective Mr. Pacaud will be joint secretary with Mr. Griffiths, taking over the full secretarial duties later.

Here again the King government has carried out a promise made to the people of Canada, which was that vacancies in Canada's representation overseas would be filled by the appointment of Canadians to the vacant positions. Mr. Pacaud, in addition to a thorough knowledge of Canada and her affairs, received part of his education in England and has travelled much. With matters on both sides of the Atlantic. This appointment, it was stated, by the Prime Minister, would be followed by the naming of Canadians to other diplomatic posts as the occasion arose. The government had stated its policy when it appointed Hon. P. C. Larkin as Canadian High Commissioner, an appointment which appears to have proven eminently satisfactory on both sides of the Atlantic, and it is proposed to adhere to that policy in future openings.

In the by-election contests, the eyes of the Dominion will be trained especially on Lanark. As far as the other constituencies are concerned, they all returned Liberal members in the last general election and the Liberal electors are confidently expected to again express their trust in a Liberal government. Lanark was the one constituency, now vacant, which returned a Conservative, the late Hon. J. A. Stewart, but present indications are that the next member will be a Liberal.

The engineers of the Conservative machine are secretly very much disturbed over what the outlook there and are shaking their heads dolefully because of the likelihood of the people turning against their candidate. Personal popularity and following had much to do with the election of the late Mr. Stewart, whose passing everyone regrets, and this time the personal "pull" will not be so evident.

Liberals in the riding are confident that they can return a supporter of the King government, and while they realize the danger of being over confident, they are going into the fight with a heartiness which bodes well for the contention. A well attended rally during the week it was decided to place a Liberal candidate in the field and will behind him there start a finish in order to carry the seat to the government side.

Government supporters in all parts of the Dominion will watch Lanark with interest during the next month, and will all be pulling for the success of the party there.

There are indications that in order to stave off defeat, the Conservatives may attempt to make it a three cornered fight, by working things so as to bring a farmer into the field to split the Liberal vote. Even if this is done, Liberals from the riding, claim there is no hope of another Conservative being returned.

One of the actions of the present government which is winning favor all over the Dominion, and particularly in the western provinces, is the provision which allows farmers in the drought-stricken areas of Saskatchewan and Alberta to move further north and take up new homesteads. For years many hundreds of good agriculturists have struggled against heart breaking odds in the endeavor to hold out against successive crop failures and finally have succeeded. They have held on and struggled along through previous years without notice from previous governments. Now, however, the King government has given the Minister of the Interior, Hon. Chas. Stewart, power to give these people a fighting chance against hard luck by letting them move to better sections of the province and start afresh.

What the action means to the Dominion is that these people are encouraged to remain in Canada as farmers instead of being allowed to drift, heartbroken, either to the cities, or out of the country entirely, and with their experience, these sturdy men and women, the government recognizes, are more of an asset to Canada than the best immigrants that could be brought in.

In addition to tackling the other problems of his vast department, the Minister of Interior, is making a determined effort to overcome the unfortunate position in which Canada is placed in the matter of coal supplies. Knowledge that Canada had abundant coal within her own borders has been general for years, but it remained for the present government to make a real effort to utilize these supplies and thus encourage the development of Canadian industries, and at the same time make the Dominion non-dependent upon the United States for fuel.

A committee of experts of the government service has been named, under the chairmanship of Dr. Charles Camsell, of the Department of Mines, to investigate the fuel problem and report as to the extent to which Canada's own fuel resources can be developed and used. That committee has already started work, quietly and efficiently. To begin with it has announced that Canada has sufficient coal among her natural resources to last for 30,000 years, which means an immense supply.

Further the committee intends to find out how that coal can be properly and efficiently adapted for use in the furnaces of the average Canadian home. Its members will investigate the possibilities and the problem of caking and briquetting the coal which is available, and the question of transporting it to Central Canada where it is needed.

The researches which the committee is now making will be the subject of legislative measures later, it is intended, and as far as possible the government will see that Canadian coal is made available in the industrial Canadian home. Then the danger of United States authorities shutting off anthracite supplies for one reason or another will not mean much to Canadians, as it does at present.

The Flowers That Bloom on a Hat.

It was late in the evening. Suddenly the door bell rang and the doctor answered. Some one needed his services, he concluded.

"Miss Caroline Hopkins?" said the caller. Miss Tompkins was the doctor's cook.

"She has retired," said the doctor.

"This is for her,"—handing the doctor a parcel from which peeped flowers and buds and leaves.

As he opened the door, the doctor said to himself:

"One of the cook's admirers has brought her a bouquet."[1] He walked into the kitchen and placed the package in a dish of water.

An indignant cook stood before him the next morning.

"I wish to give notice," she announced. "I'll not stay another day in a house where some varmint put my new hat in a basin of water."—Everybody's.

Quebec's Record Crop.

In an official statement, C. E. Marquis, chief statistician of the Province of Quebec, estimates that Quebec 1922 crop will attain a value of $225,000,000, as compared with $219,000,000 last year. This slight difference with an increased crop is due to the falling off in prices of agricultural products.

Aluminium Saucepans.

Aluminium saucepans are not half so cumbersome as those of iron, and they are light and pleasing to the eye.

But they need looking after properly! For instance, you must never clean an aluminium utensil with soda, as this is very injurious to the metal.

No matter how clean you keep these saucepans you will find that the inside will block through constant use. This black can be cleaned off in the following way:—

Collect some very fine wood ash, place it on a piece of rag with some metal-cleaning powder or dry soap, damp it and rub round the stained parts.

If you have no wood ash use ordinary coal ash, but be very careful not to scratch the saucepans. In fact, it is best, as an extra precaution, to put the coal ash in the rag, not on it, thus forming a kind of pad, which can then be rubbed over the stains as before.

If aluminium saucepans become blackened on the outside, from contact with the fire, you can soon make them look like new if you rub the outside occasionally with some powdered soap and warm water, afterwards rinsing them in clean warm water.

Remember that aluminium saucepans will not stand too much knocking about, so don't scratch or bump them more than you can help.

Cruel Pun.

SAVED HER FROM AN OPERATION

So Thinks Mrs. Tracey of Ontario, Regarding Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Knightington, Ontario.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the change of life for troubles that women often have at that time. I had not been well for a year and was not really able to do my work. A friend who had taken the Vegetable Compound herself recommended it to me and I think its use saved me from an operation. I highly recommend it to all women who have troubles like mine, and am willing for you to use my testimonial."—Mrs. Daniel J. Tracey, Knightington, Ontario.

Some female troubles may through neglect reach a stage when an operation is necessary. But the more common ailments are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

When disturbing symptoms first appear take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles.

OAT HULLS A DANGER TO LIVE STOCK

WHEN THEIR INCLUSION IN FEEDING STUFFS IS LEGAL AND ILLEGAL

"Oat hulls contain very little nutritive material for the feeding of live stock and are exceedingly difficult to digest, points out Circular No. 71, just issued by the Seed Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. In fact, the circular goes on to say, feeds containing a high percentage of hulls have not infrequently been blamed for causing injury and even death to live stock. Happily, since the passing of the Feeding Stuffs Act in 1920, the fraudulent use of oat hulls has been gradually checked, and at present few manufacturers take the risk of using them in an unlawful manner. This is proved by a statement in the circular that the percentage of oat hulls used in samples submitted to the Ottawa feed laboratory from various sources has fallen in the past four years from 30 per cent. to 35 per cent. A score of examples are given of the illegal use of hulls in samples taken at random from those received in the ordinary way for microscopical examination at the Ottawa laboratory. These indicate that the practice has not been confined to any one province, but it is gratifying to be told that during the past two years much has been done to protect the public by officials of the Seed Branch charged with the enforcement of this Act.

In brief, the Act limits the classification of feeds to three main groups, namely, commercial feeding stuffs, chops, and mill stuffs, and requires a statement of ingredients to accompany each container of such stuffs or chop offered for sale. In a summary the circular, which can be obtained free of costs by application to the Publication Branch of the Agricultural Department, at Ottawa, explains that the hulls are generally used either unmixed or mixed with other materials. Unmixed they are usually pulverized and appear on the market under attractive brand names and frequently without the proper labelling required by the Act. Mixed they may occur with more or less ground oats, where they often pass as oat chop; with one or more ingredients as commercial feeding stuffs, in which case their presence should be stated; or with mill feeds, either with or without screenings. When sold in accordance with the Act their use in feeding stuffs is within the law, but when used as an adulterant the seller and the manufacturer are liable to prosecution.

Mrs. Dale Could Hardly Climb the Stairs

"I want to tell what Tanlac has done for me for the benefit of others," said Mrs. John Dale, 65 Catherine St., South, Hamilton, Ont.

"About three years ago I began to suffer from rheumatism which kept getting worse until something over a year ago, when I found myself in almost constant pain. At times my arms up to my elbows became so swollen and painful I couldn't raise my hands above my head, and my fingers were so stiff I could scarcely hold a coffee pot to pour out the coffee.

"I could hardly go up a flight of stairs on account of the stiffness in my muscles. I became so nervous the noises made by the children playing about almost made me frantic. No medicine did me any goods, and I just seemed to be constantly growing worse.

"Seeing so many fine statements in the papers about Tanlac, I decided to get a bottle and see if it would do me any good. My rheumatism got better with the first bottle, and, now that I have finished my second bottle, the last trace of it is gone. My nervousness is gone, too, and I am so happy over being free from pain I can't fully express it."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

Employee Painfully Injured.

William Glenn, an employee of The Robinson Co., Limited, suffered avery painful injury on Saturday afternoon last. While working around a pulley his right hand was drawn in and the fifth finger severed. Prompt medical aid was furnished and Mr. Glenn was taken home to his home. While not serious, the injury will considerably handicap him for some time.

Typewriting Awards.

The following certificates and medals were awarded by The Underwood Typewriter Co., during the months of September and October to students in the commercial Department of the Collegiate Institute: Misses Laura Shuttleworth and Mooney, certificates for writing thirty net words per minute in a fifteen minute test; Misses Loretta Murphy and Lottie VanAlstyne, medals for writing forty net words per minute in the same test. The above awards were recommended and certified as correct by Dr. Morden and Miss Brown.

Motor Truck Collides with Ford.

A large motor truck, the property of the Dodbourne Cartage Co., Belleville, crashed into a Ford touring car driven by Sandy Parks, at the corner of Dundas and Centre streets, about one o'clock Saturday afternoon. The truck was proceeding west on Dundas street, and the Ford coming south on Centre street was turning east on Dundas street. The Ford was knocked into a telephone pole and the front end practically demolished, while the truck escaped with much less damage. Both drivers escaped injury. County Constable Brent was on the job and is investigating.

Napanee to be Entertained.

It is very interesting to hear that our enterprising townsman, Mr. Geo. Tustin, is installing a wireless receiving set that will put Napanee on the map, as his machine is one of the most up-to-date in Canada. It will certainly be a novel feature for the citizens of Napanee to visit Wonderland and listen to a high class concert given in some big city and brought to them by wireless. We wish Mr. Tustin every success. When completely installed Mr. Tustin proposes giving radio concerts in Wonderland Theatre. The power of his machine will be understood when we say there is only one other machine of its capacity in Canada.

The Ideals of a Great Journal.

From the day of its inception fifty years ago the aim of its publishers has been to make the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal a great paper, securing for it fame and character, so that it would be looked upon as a national journal for all Canada; a paper instructive and pleasing, but not just a money-making project. As a matter of fact, there has been no studied calculation about dividends or any kind of monetary gain, so long as the interests of the subscribers were cared for. Competent judges declare that there is no paper published in the English language that gives such superb value as the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. The subscription price is only $2.00 per year.

A Trying Ordeal.

After having had his left arm taken off by contact with a saw in a mill near Harlowe, Bert Gernsey, who was alone in the mill, walked a half a mile to his boarding house where he received first aid, and then started to walk to Flinton where the nearest physician has his office. On the way he was picked up by a couple of travellers who rushed him there in their auto, but when the party arrived at Flinton they found that the physician was not at home and it was necessary to make the trip to Tweed to get medical aid for the victim of the unfortunate accident. The doctor at Tweed was at home and soon fixed the young man up and had him taken to a Belleville hospital, where he is reported to be doing nicely.

Barns Destroyed by Fire.

On Friday fire destroyed the large re-built barn on the farm of Mr. Albert Pike, Sandhurst. Nothing remains of the barn, the season's crop, implements and other contents. The loss is about $5,000, with insurance of $2500. Mr. Pike is a son-in-law of Mr. Fred A. Perry.

On Sunday morning Mr. Irwin Sexsmith, Richmond, had the misfortune to lose his barns, dwelling house, and outbuildings by fire. The season's crop, a splendid outfit of machinery, the contents of the dwelling and outbuildings were nearly all destroyed. Mr. Sexsmith's loss will be very heavy as his property was not heavily insured. Mr. and Mrs. Sexsmith were in Toronto when the fire was discovered by neighbors.

THE INCREASED DEMAND FOR HYDRO ENERGY

By J. E. MIDDLETON

Hydro-Electric officials continually assert that the demand for electrical energy throughout Ontario is bound to increase in a marked degree for many years. The "uneletrical" person is inclined to question that opinion because he thinks that a "Hydro" municipality is fairly well served now. He points out that the street-lighting system is fully organized, that practically all the factories in the community are using Hydro service; that the merchants have their stores equipped, and the domestic use of electricity is common.

Yet experience shows that there is a steady increase of consumption on the part of practically every customer. Where no new customers were listed the demand would be larger from year to year. Consider domestic lighting alone. The records show that in Barrie the average consumption per month has increased from 18 kilowatt-hours to 35; in Bades from 13 to 24; in Acton from 15 to 25; in Brampton from 18 to 39; in Caledonia from 16 to 28; in Chatham from 14 to 29; in Toronto from 25 to 54. These are cases chosen at random, merely to show that the tendency in the Hydro-Electric service is to more and still more use of the service. The installation of various electrical devices to ease the drudgery of housekeeping is reflected in the records of consumption. And yet it is only occasionally that one can discover a home completely equipped—a house with an electric washer, an electric vacuum cleaner, an electric iron, an electric range, air heaters, toasters, and the like. Because of the low rates of electric energy throughout the Hydro-Electric system the consumer has a constant urge to increase his electrical equipment.

But similar increases in the average monthly consumption are found in the records of commercial light service. In Brockville the monthly commercial consumption has increased from 59 to 89 kilowatt-hours; in Cannington from 147 to 161; in Chesley from 31 to 51; in Chatham from 81 to 115; in Chesterville from 21 to 84; in Galt from 68 to 176; in Lonsdale from 143 to 180. The merchant has discovered that the free use of good lighting benefits his business. Similar results are observed in the use of industrial power. Generally it may be said that the man who installs Hydro-Electric service installed makes more use of it from year to year.

Annually also new customers are secured. There is no community with electric lights in every house. Many of the older houses are not wired and the owners in the times of high prices have delayed the improvement. It is a matter of time and occasion, but from year to year new customers will be found in old houses. Every new house erected in these days is fully wired, and the moment it is occupied there is a new customer for Hydro-Electric energy.

The engineers of the Hydro System have a complete record of the consumption in each community and by charts have been able to fix the average annual ratio of increase. Their estimates of future consumption are not mere optimistic guesses but are scientific conclusions reached by proper engineering methods.

THE KINGDOM OF WOOD PULP

How many people understand the marvellous transition that has taken place, when they hold in their hands a sheet of paper—even their daily newspaper?

Just a little while ago, it was a living thing in the forest. It spread its wide branches until they met in a vast canopy of brilliant green. Monarchs, each, of the Far Places, each roll of paper was a tree embedded in the firm mossy soil and raising its proud head to summer sunshine and the long, bleak winters of the Land of the Flying Snow.

Then the sound of the axe was heard in the forest, and down the shadowy slopes echoed the lusty songs of men, as the chips began to fly. Straining horses dragged the prostrate logs over pine-needle paths, until river currents welcomed them to a still longer voyage of discovery.

Virgin forests are not desecrated when put to a man's purpose. It is merely a marvellous transformation. Every forest tree is a library of books or a fluttering white stream from the heart of the North Land. And there are always something of inspiration in the sudden knowledge that, as one reads, he holds in his hands the product, the romance, the profound majesty and beauty of the forests.

But there is need for a united effort to save these forests from a real peril, a real destruction. Every year entire tracts of timber-land are ravaged by fire. The hunter or trapper leaves a live coal burning as he passes on; a match is tossed carelessly into dry leaves by the amateur woodsman. There is tragedy in this, a crime against Nature, against man himself. It is not what we use that causes paper shortage, it is what we waste, what we wantonningly destroy. Let every man be a custodian of our forests, in the thing that he says, in the things that he does. Fire in a forest knows no quarter.

King Fled Before the Enemy.

ATHENS, Nov. 6.—The Greek Investigation Committee have submitted its findings to the Revolutionary Committee as to those guilty of being responsible for the military debacle in Asia Minor.

Gen. Papoulas, former commander of the army, and a number of staff officers here, testified that former King Constantine assumed command of the army during the recent operations. When the orders for a counter-offensive against Angora were launched from Field Headquarters at Eskishehr, Constantine immediately fled to Mudania, where he boarded a warship, without worrying about the army, according to the testimony.

The investigators find that Constantine was guilty of flight before the enemy.

BONAR LAW SPEAKS.

He Waxed Sarcastic About David Lloyd George.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Premier Bonar Law in his speech to an audience of women in Drury Lane Theatre, contrary to rumor, rather refrained from personal invective or indiscretion in his replies to the attacks of Lord Birkenhead, Winston Churchill and others, although he was somewhat sarcastic at the expense of Mr. Lloyd George, whom he compared to a drummer in the army, serving a useful purpose in war time. Mr. Lloyd George, he remarked, did the drumming better than anyone; but when the charge ended and some had fallen and others were in the hospital, a drummer would be out of place in the hospital unless his drum-sticks were taken from him.

At another point Mr. Bonar Law contended that the fact that the nation owed an unforgetable debt of gratitude to the former Premier for great services in the war was no reason why Mr. Lloyd George should hold the Premiership for life or why the country was not entitled to a chance of Government.

With reference to Anglo-American relations, he said, "There is no trouble on the horizon there. I think I may remove any cause for hope—I think without indiscretion —that America may gradually take an interest for example, in the League of Nations in one form or another.

"She may gradually feel that it is her duty to help in the chaos which the war left behind. I think that without any criticism of America. Far from it. It may be useful in this state to repeat what was said under my predecessor's regime, saying it, but to repeat now, because what I say, may probably be reported in America.

"Speaking of America in July, 1918, I said this: 'It is moral force which brought the United States to the Allies. She had much to lose in a material sense; she had little to gain in the great things of life and very little in small things. The saying of the Scripture was true; "He who would save his life shall lose it." The people of the United States had nothing material to gain because they would lose money, but they would gain something, something far more precious than money, they had saved the soul of America."

SULTAN IS DEPOSED.

New Crisis Has Been Created In Turkey.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 6.—An end to the Sultanate in Turkey has been unanimously decreed by the Grand National Assembly sitting at Angora. The executive and legislative powers of the country have been conferred by the Assembly upon the nation, and the palace of the Sublime Porte which "through corrupt ignorance for several centuries provoked numerous ills for the country, has passed into the domain of history."

A Caliph is to be chosen by the Assembly from a member of the Osman Dynasty to succeed the Sultan, but the resolution of the Assembly announced that the Turkish Government would remain the keystone of the Caliphate. The choice of the Caliph is to be that member of the Osmanli family who is the best instructed, the best educated, the most honest and the wisest.

The Assembly also decided that all treaties entered into by the Constantinople Government since March 16, 1920, were null and void. The decision of the Assembly was followed by the proclamation of a national holiday and the firing of a salute of 101 guns.

Notwithstanding the Assembly's decree that the era of liberation had at last been entered into, the Sultan presided at an extraordinary council of his Ministers. The Grand Vizier, Tewfik Pasha, and his colleagues kissed the Sultan's hand on the occasion of the Prophet's birthday, received their patriarchal dignity and expressed the utmost indignation at what was termed the rash action of the Angora Government in proclaiming an end to the Sultanate.

While nothing definite can be ascertained regarding the decision reached at the council, it was reported in high quarters that there was good reason to believe the Sultan had disputed the legal character of the National Assembly's decision, in being declared the Assembly was elected under abnormal circumstances.

Monarchist and Turkish moderate circles anticipate internal dissension in consequence of the action of the National Assembly. They express the view that the step of the Angora Government is a triumph for the Bolshevik policy in the Near East and a prelude to the Sovietization of Turkey.

More Population Needed.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The Duke of Devonshire, speaking at Lincoln, devoted the main part of his speech to a mild criticism of the late Government, in alluding to the need of the dominions for more population he declared that Canada was simply crying out for people and capital.

He was confident that a solution of many of Great Britain's most pressing problems was to be found in steady and sound schemes for the development of the enormous resources within the Empire.

"This is an election in which fireworks are not required," declared the duke, adding, "I am quite incapable of fireworks."

Times Once More National Paper.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The London Times, now that it has become the property of John Walter and Major the Hon. John Astor, will be established as a national newspaper. It is to be controlled as to the broad lines of its policy by a board of distinguished men chosen for their standing in the community, interested in politics, but not primarily politicians.

The Times has already resumed its traditional attitude toward public affairs, and it will continue to aim at representing the best in British national opinion.

Albino Deer Seen.

SARANAC LAKE, N.Y., Nov. 6.—The first Albino deer to be seen in the Adirondacks this season has been sighted near Ampersand Mountain. Several hunters and others have seen the buck's ghostly outline and have been so startled by the strange creature they have been unable to raise their rifles to shoot.

Let Ulster Alone.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The members of the Ulster delegation who have come to England to canvass the constituencies presenting Ulster views and aspirations in connection with the coming British general election, were entertained by the Duke and Duchess of Abercorn.

Lord Carson reiterated that Northern Ireland would never submit to being joined to the Free State. He also pleaded with the Ulster Government to disregard all question of religion and political beliefs within their borders and to "extend the right hand of fellowship in promoting the administration of justice just as well for one body of the community as for another."

The great need of Ulster at present, he said, was to be let alone by the British Government and not to be interfered with as it tried to work out its own destiny.

Farmer Beaten and Robbed.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 6. — Andrew Cook, a farmer of Camden, was badly beaten up and relieved of $270, which he had brought to the city for the discharge of a mortgage, in the Face-Street district late Thursday night. Cook was hit with a blunt instrument and kicked about the head and was unconscious when found.

Two foreigners were arrested in a shack nearby. The money has not been recovered.

Declines Nomination.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 6.—Contending that he could not efficiently represent the workers in two offices, F. J. Dixon, Independent Labor member in the Provincial Legislature, has declined the mayoralty nomination offered him at a party meeting here. The selection of a candidate was deferred until next week.

Four Killed In Explosion.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 6. — Four men were killed and four others injured in an explosion at the Birdseye slope of the Oliphant mine of the Hudson Coal Company, near here, last Thursday afternoon.

Accused of Smuggling Gift.

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—How much export tax did the ex-kaiser pay on the diadem he bought for Princess Hermine, the Socialists Wels and Braun asked in the Reichstag. "It is reported and not denied," they said, "that the kaiser ordered a diadem worth 800,000 gold papiermarks made by a Berlin jeweler. We ask if export permission was given and if so how much export duty the kaiser paid. If no export license has been obtained, what does the Government intend to do to prevent smuggling into Holland; what steps does it intend to take if the diadem is already past the frontier?"

Halsey on Retired List.

LONDON, Nov. 6. — Vice-Admiral Sir Lionel Halsey has been placed on the retired list at his own request. This is in order that there may be opportunity for younger officers in the navy being promoted. Rear-Admiral Sir John Green has been promoted to the position of vice-admiral.

Sir Lionel Halsey was one of the chief members of the Prince of Wales' staff while his royal highness was on his tours in Canada, Australia, India, and Japan.

READY FOR ELECTIONS

Voting in England Will Take Place Nov. 15th.

Record Number of Candidates Running For the British Parliament—Labor Party Feels Greatly Depressed by Overwhelming Defeat In the Borough Elections.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Following is the "time table" of the British election:

Proclamation dissolving Parliament, October 26.

Nomination day, November 4.

Elections, November 15.

Assembling of the New Parliament, November 20.

Although evidences of intense public interest are lacking in this general election, there have never been so many candidates brought forward by all parties. For the 607 seats available in the next House of Commons, there are 1,353 candidates to date, and even allowing for probable withdrawals before nomination, the total promises to be the largest on record.

There are 464 Conservative candidates, 316 Independent Liberals, 371 Coalitionists and 402 Laborites at present in the field. The principal topic of speculation in the political clubs is the possible effect a last minute agreement to avoid cut-throating candidacies between Labor and Liberals. But all efforts to arrange one have been spurned by Labor for the simple reason that it would hopelessly split Labor's own party.

Until Lloyd George has spoken, it is impossible to say whether the negotiations which have been going on behind the scenes during the past few days, for a Conservative-Georgian pact will come to anything; but there is a hope of a fuller feeling to-day on the subject in Georgian quarters, where the belief persists that Bonar Law cannot really hope to secure an independent majority large enough to enable him to undertake the government without Georgian support.

A sweeping Labor defeat in the London and provincial municipal elections left Labor headquarters in an exceedingly depressed state of mind. Returns from the provinces show defeat of 350 Labor candidates out of a total of 574.

In eighteen London boroughs out of a total of 28 from where completed returns have been received, Labor lost 175 seats and gained only five. Other Labor losses from boroughs from where returns are still incomplete make a total of 220.

In five boroughs, Labor members of Council were completely cleaned out. But though the political Labor headquarters is suffering severe shock, it is cheering itself up with several plausible excuses for defeat.

It is pointed out that many seats were lost through the coalition of non-Labor parties, and that the nearness of the general election forced Labor to divert its energy and money from the municipal to the national campaign. The Laborites also say with some truth that municipal elections frequently indicate the result of a national election —but in inverse proportion.

Plight of Farmers.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 6.—Utmost leniency to farmers of Manitoba, who are in difficult financial straits, was urged at a meeting of business interests called by Hon. D. L. McLeod, Provincial Secretary, for thorough discussion of the situation. The creditor interests were of the opinion that the Government should mediate between the debtor and creditor where cases of unnecessary hardship arose from undue pressure, and suggested the establishment by the Government of committees at central local points for investigating cases submitted. Where these committees were unable to make satisfactory adjustments, the matter should be referred to the arbitrator Mr. McLeod, for final action. It was conceded on all sides that although the crop this year was probably the largest in the history of the province, the cost of production and the low price obtained meant that all that could be looked for was the payment of liabilities incurred during the present crop year. This year's crop was not a "debt-paying" one, and very little of the past debts could be liquidated as a result of its harvest.

Killed by a Train.

BETHANY, Nov. 6.—Thomas Williamson, 60 years old, was struck and instantly killed by a C.P.R. train on Thursday at a crossing about a mile and a half from Bethany.

Deceased was a resident of Cavan Township, and was well known throughout the district. An inquest was opened.

FASCISTI ARE IN POWER

They Have Some Old Scores to Settle

New Rulers of Italy Want to Finish Off Communists and Other Enemies — Their Message to Britain and the United States Interpreted to Mean That They Are Friendly to Allies.

ROME, Nov. 6.—This is young Italy, as opposed to the old parliamentary Italy with its long parliamentary tradition. The Fascisti, whose energy and determination put Mussolini in office, have gone obediently home, each carrying word that Italy is ready for new and big things.

They had old scores to settle. The Fascisti has Communists and other political enemies to finish off, but that is being quickly done. Ten thousand Fascisti marched into Trieste and took charge. They cleaned out the Communists in no time, and police reports show ten dead and four wounded.

At Milan they burned the office of the Socialist newspaper Avanti, of which Mussolini himself was once editor. Mussolini broke with Avanti at the beginning of the war because Avanti was against fighting the Germans. This break was the beginning of Mussolini's career as a Nationalist, which culminated in making him Premier and leader of the Nationalist movement which can go far.

The facts regarding the devastating of Avanti are given by the Giornale di Roma, which also publishes the fact that the Fascisti devastated the Communist and Socialist Club in Milan. Giornale di Roma is a Fascisti newspaper. The Fascisti disclaim any connection with the destruction of the office of the Liberal Milanese newspaper Secolo.

The Corriere della Sera reappeared again after forcible suspension. The Giornale di Roma, which is in the best position to know, says the Fascisti visited Nitti's Roman home, taking away papers.

Bonelli, who is the leader of the Italian Communists, has a flat in Rome, from which he fled before the Fascisti arrived. The Fascisti, knowing this, boasted openly of obtaining funds from the Third International, entered his house and threw his furniture into the street. A "To Let" notice was placed in the window, and portions of the furniture were carried away as trophies, his secretary shaking the face and painted Italian colors on it.

The Fascisti hunted out all the Communist leaders, but found them gone. An official Fascisti order has been issued, forbidding men going in bodies, or singly into the workmen's quarter in the suburbs of Rome.

He has also made indicated his program, but his salutations to Bonar Law and Charles E. Hughes are taken to show that he wishes to dispel any idea that Fascism is hostile to the Allied interests.

Mussolini's message to the Italian ambassadors and ministers abroad show a direct and energetic attitude: "I awake in the work of all of you a new spirit and a great appreciation of the Fatherland."

Cheered Lady Astor.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., Nov. 6.—Lady Astor was thoroughly delighted with the sweeping Conservative victory last Thursday in the municipal elections. Labor got only one ward, with the small majority of 11, while the Conservatives gained two seats on the council, one unexpectedly from the Conservatives and the other from Labor.

Lady Astor was greeted to the echo when she appeared at Conservative headquarters. Her Independent-Unionist opponent, Dr. H. Wansey Blyth, did not come to realize that the liquor question is the most prominent in the contest against the latter, and on the subject her latest pronouncements are that he will not believe in confiscation without compensation. I would not force prohibition on the people. I do not believe that would be democratic."

Victory Loan Books Closed.

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—On account of the interest payment due on the first day of December, 1922, the transfer books of the 1917 Victory Loan and the 1915-25 War Loan will be closed from October 31 to November 30, inclusive, according to an announcement from the Department of Finance.

Bonds which are received at the Department for transfer after October 31 will not be transferred until after the opening of the transfer books on December 1, it is said.

Rum-Runner Swims to Safety.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 6.—Leaping from a speeding motor boat near Ecorse Friday, a man believed to be a rum-runner, made his escape from the state police by swimming ashore and disappearing in the marshes.

The police captured the launch when it went aground. In it they say they found 30 cases of Canadian liquor. Both launch and beer were confiscated.

Meaford Loses Power.

MEAFORD, Ont., Nov. 6. — The whole town was in darkness here. For the time being, the Georgian Bay Milling & Power Co., which supplies electric power for the town, has suspended business, and all electric power is cut off for a short time. The company is negotiating with the Bank of Montreal with regard to future operations, and the plant may be running to-morrow.

Editor Placed In Custody.

QUEBEC, Nov. 6.—John H. Roberts, editor of the Axe, on refusing to answer to the satisfaction of the Legislative Assembly questions asked him when he appeared before the Bar of the House, was placed in the custody of the Sergeant-at-arms pending a definite decision by the house.

CATTLE MARKETS

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—Although cattle receipts at the Union Stock Yards last week were about two thousand head under the previous week, they were, nevertheless, in very heavy enough to meet the demand, and a decidedly dragging market was the result. The offering, which was slightly over 8,500 cattle, was augmented by a hopper of 1,500 sheep over the previous week. The preponderance of common to medium cattle was also a sharp reduction in prices, and these classes were off from $1.25 to $1.50.

The offering of hogs was a liberal one last week, and most of the hogs sold at around $9.50 f.o.b. cars, $10.25 fed and watered. Select graded hogs, if they were extra choice, brought up to $10.75 fed and watered.

There was a decidedly slow trade in calves last week, and prices broke badly. Over eight hundred were on hand, strengthened early in the week, but prices eased before the close of trading. Monday, 300 calves was the poorest so far this year, and the top price at the close was $9 a cwt. Good offerings of veal were down about $2 a cwt., with the fair to good classes off from $3 to $4 a cwt., from the previous period. Good lambs sold at $11.50 per cwt., while sheep held steady, from $6 to $7 for good lightweights. Heavy ewes were in good demand.

A good demand was shown for some choice finished cattle, but generally speaking the trade was slow and dragging all week.

The top for heavy steers was $9 a cwt. paid for six averaging 1,570 lbs. Odd lots of choice butcher steers brought $6 to $6.25, with top heifers at $6.50 to $6.75, and the bulk to packers up to $10; bulk bologna bulls, $3.85; desirable beef kind, $4.25 to $5.15; western grassers, $5 to $7.15, according to quality, and best beef cows and heifers, canner and cutters, moderately active, steady; prices for bulls, steadily active, strong; veal calves, 25c to 50c lower, mostly 25c off; quality considered; stockers and feeders, dull, weak to 25c lower; bulk stockers and feeders, $5.75 to $6.75; bulk, $6.25; choice packers up to $10; bulk bologna bulls, $3.85; desirable beef kind, $4.25 to $5.15; best bulls, $5.15 to $5.50.

Sheep, 7,000; fat native lambs, steady; top, $12.75 to packers; bulk, $12.50 to $12.65; culls, $10 to $10.50; fat western lambs on sale; feeders steady; good $12 to $12.50; feeding lambs, $11.50 to $12.65; western feeding ewes, $5.25 to $6.25; choice 75-lb. yearlings, western to killers, $12.15; others, desirable, $11.50 to $12; canners, heavier, 110 lbs., $10; sheep, steady; heavy fat ewes, $4.50 to $5.50; 300 good 96-lb. fat western ewes, $7.

SOLDIERS' SETTLEMENT BOARD

The Home Branch of the Soldier Settlement Board conducted a four-day short course in Home Economics in the I.O.O.F. hall, Napanee, last week.

These educational classes have been conducted by the Home Branch throughout Canada, during the past 3 years, for the benefit of wives of returned men who have settled on the land. The success of this branch of educational work is due largely to the efforts of Mrs. Jean Muldrew, Director of the Home Branch for Canada, who has promoted this work from its inception throughout all the provinces. Mrs. Muldrew and Miss Ruth Lampkin, Ontario Director of the Home Branch S. S. B., directed the course in Napanee last week.

A nurse was provided for taking care of six babies in order that their mothers might be care free to attend the four classes.

The babies were selected for these classes in this district:

Mrs. C. R. Fisher, Frankford; Mrs. H. M. Putman, Deseronto; Mrs. J. N. Maillie, Joyceville; Mrs. F. W. Churcher, Picton; Mrs. J. G. Newman, Picton; Mrs. R. Crawford, Shannonville; Mrs. M. Trepanier, Flinton; Mrs. C. E. Demill, Foxboro; Mrs. T. F. Jordan, Rossmore; Mrs. C. B. Cannon, Portland; Mrs. J. W. Knox, Ameliasburg; Mrs. J. R. Donaldson, Merrickville; Miss E. Donaldson, Merrickville; Mrs. F. Milner, Milford; Mrs. Geo. Goodwin, Cherry Valley; Mrs. A. E. Mitchell, Demorestville; Mrs. W. F. Turnham, Odessa; Mrs. D. Clissold, Lyndhurst.

The Home Branch are particularly grateful for the co-operation of the I. O. O. F. and the Department of Agriculture, Napanee, for their extended courtesies and assistance in providing such comfortable accommodations for the classes. Through the courtesy of Mr. Harry Vanluven, a fine victrola was loaned for entertainment during the course.

The members of the Women's Institute and the Red Cross were invited to attend any of the sessions which might be of interest.

CHAPTER VII.

Miss La Rue Pays a Call.

Some slight noise caused Westcott to straighten up, and turn partially around. He had barely time to fling up one arm in the warding off of a blow. The next instant was one of mad, desperate struggle, in which he realized only that he dare not relax his grip on the wrist of his unknown antagonist. It was a fierce, intense grapple, every muscle strained to the utmost, silent except for the stamping of feet, deadly in purpose.

Twice Westcott drove his clenched right into the shadowed face, smashing it the last time so hard the man's grip relaxed, and he went staggering back. With a leap forward, the battle fury on him, Westcott closed before the other could regain position. Again the clenched fist struck and the fellow went down in the darkness, whirling backward to the earth—and lay there, motionless.

An instant, panting, breathless, scarcely yet comprehending what had occurred, the victor stared at the huddled figure, his arm drawn back. Then he became aware of excitement within, the sound of voices, the tramp of feet on the floor, the sudden opening of a door. A gleam of light shot out, revealing the figures of men. With one spring he was across the shapeless form on the ground, and had vanished into the darkness beyond.

Lacy was first to reach the unconscious body, stumbling over it in the black shadow, as he rushed forward, revolver in hand. He cursed, rising to his knees, and staring about in the silent darkness.

"There's a man lying here—dead, likely. Bring a light. No, the fellow is alive. Damn it, it's Moore. Here you—what happened?"

The fellow groaned, opened his eyes, and looked about dazedly.

"There—there was a fellow at that window there. I—I saw him from below, and crept up behind but he turned around just as I struck."

Again the Clenched Fist Struck.

"He was at that window, you say?"

"Yes; kneelin' down like he was lookin' into the room. Oh, Lord!"

Lacy crunched over to the side of the shack, and bent down to get a better view. His fingers came in contact with the knife which upheld the sash, and he plucked it out, holding it up into the beam of light passing through the rent in the torn curtain. He stared at the curiously carved handle intently.

"That's Jim Westcott's jack-knife. He's been listening to all we said. Now we are up against it."

"What's that?" The question came from Enright, still at the corner of the house, unable to tell what had happened.

"Westcott has been here listening to our talk. He pried up the window with this knife, so he could hear. Moore caught him, and got knocked out."

"He—he heard our talk in—in there," repeated the dazed lawyer, his lips trembling. "And—has got away? Good heavens! man, where has he gone? After the sheriff?"

Lacy stared at him through the darkness, and burst into a roar of unrestrained laughter.

"Who? Jim Westcott? The sheriff? Well, hardly at this stage of the game. That's your way down East, no doubt, but out in this country the style is different. No, sir; Westcott isn't after any sheriff. In the first place he hasn't any evidence. He knows a thing or two, but he can't prove it; and if we move faster than he does we'll block his game—see?"

"What do you mean?"

Lacy leaned forward, and blessed his answer into Enright's ear.

"Put Cavendish where he can't get at him. There's no other chance. If Jim Westcott ever finds that fellow alive our goose is cooked. And we've got the advantage—we know where the man is."

"And Westcott doesn't?"

"Exactly, but he will know. He'll comb these hills until he finds the trail—that's Jim Westcott. Come on back inside, both of you, and I'll tell you my plan."

The door closed behind them, shutting out the yellow glow, and leaving the hillside black and lonely.

Miss Donovan did not go down to supper. Beaton waited some time in the office, his eyes on the stairs, but she failed to appear, and he lacked the necessary courage to seek her in her own room. Then Enright called him and compelled his attendance. The absence of the girl was not caused from any lack of appetite, as she subsidized the Chinaman to smuggle her a supply of food by way of the back stairs, which she ate with decided relish, but she had no desire to share any anxiety regarding a meeting with the newcomers.

Her newspaper experience had given her some knowledge of human nature and she felt convinced that her task of extracting information would be greatly simplified if these people sought her company first. She was at the window when some one rapped at the door. She arose to her feet, and took a step or two forward, her heart beating swifter.

"Come in."

The door opened, and the light from the windows revealed Miss La Rue, rather tastefully attired in green silk, her blond hair fluffed artfully, and a dainty patch of black court-plaster adorning one cheek.

"Pardon me, please," the voice somewhat high-pitched, "but they told me downstairs you were from New York."

"Yes, that is my home; won't you come in?"

"Sure I will. Why I was so lonesome in this hole I simply couldn't stand it any longer. I know your name; it's Miss Donovan—well, mine is Celeste La Rue."

"A very pretty name; rather unusual. Are you French?"

The other laughed, crossing her feet prettily, and extracting a cigarette case from a handbag.

"French? Well, I guess not. My dad's name was Capley, and I annexed this other when I went on the stage. It tickled the Tolonies, and sounds better than Sadie Capley. You liked it yourself."

"It is better adapted to that purpose—you are an actress then?"

"Well, nobody ever said so. I can dance and sing a bit, and know how to wear clothes. Tell me, when were you in New York?"

"About a month ago."

"Well, didn't you see the Revue?"

"The last one? Certainly."

"That's where I shone—second girl on the right in the chorus, and I was in the eccentric dance with Joe Stearns; some hit—what?"

"Yes, I remember now; they called you the Red Fairy—because of your ruby ring. What in the world ever brought you out here?"

Celeste laughed, a cloud of smoke curling gracefully above her blonde hair.

"Some joke, isn't it? Well, it's no engagement at the Good Luck dance hall yonder, you can bet on that. The fact is I've quit the business, and am going to take a flyer in mining?"

"Mining? That sounds like money in these days. They tell me there is no placer-mining any longer, and that it requires a fortune to develop. I wouldn't suppose a chorus girl—"

"Oh, pshaw!" and Miss La Rue leaned forward, a bright glow on each

"There's More Ways of Making Money in New York Than Drawing a Salary."

cheek. "There are more ways of making money in New York than drawing a salary. I've caught on to a few things in the last five years. It pays better to be Celeste La Rue than it ever did to be Sadie Capley. Do you get me?"

Miss Donovan nodded. Her acquaintance with New York fast life supplied all necessary details, and it was quite evident the girl had no sense of shame. Instead she was rather proud of the success she had achieved.

"I imagine you are right," she admitted pleasantly. "So you found a backer? A mining man?"

"Not on your life. None of your wild west for me. As soon as some business is straightened out here, it's back to Broadway."

"Who is it?" ventured the other cautiously. "Mr. Beaton?"

"Ned Beaton!" Miss La Rue's voice rose to a shriek. "Oh, Lord! I should say not! Why that fellow never had fifty dollars of his own at one time in his life. He's only a tin-horn sport."

"Then it is the other?"

"Sure; he's the real thing. Not much to look at, maybe, but he fairly oozes the long green. He's a lawyer."

"Oh, indeed," and Miss Donovan's eyes darkened. She was interested, now feeling herself on the verge of discovery. "From New York?"

"Sure; maybe you've heard of him? He knew you as soon as Beaton mentioned your name; he's Patrick Enright of Enright and Dougherty."

Miss Donovan's fingers gripped hard on the footboard of the bed, her teeth clinched to keep back a sudden excitation of surprise. This was more than she had bargained for, yet the other woman, coolly watching, in spite of her apparent flippancy, observed no change in the girl's manner. Apparently the disclosure meant little.

"Know him, you say? No, I think not. He claimed to know me? That is strange. Who did he think I was?"

Miss La Rue bit her lip. She had run 4 her match evidently, but would strike harder.

"A reporter on the Star. Naturally we couldn't help wondering what you was doing out here. You are in the newspaper business, aren't you?"

"Yes," realizing further concealment was useless, "but on my vacation. I thought I explained all that to Mr. Beaton. I am not exactly a reporter. I do feature-stuff."

"Whatever that is."

"Human-interest stories; anything unusual; strange happenings in everyday life, you know."

"Murders, and—and robberies."

"Occasionally, if they are out of the ordinary." She drew a swift breath and made the plunge. "Like the Frederick Cavendish case—do you remember that?"

Miss La Rue stared at her across the dazzling screen, but if she changed color the gloom concealed it and her voice was steady enough.

"No," she said shortly, "I never read those things. What happened?"

"Oh, nothing much. He was rich, and was found dead in his apartments at the Waldron—evidently killed by a burglar. The case is probably forgotten by this time. Let's speak about something else—I hate to talk shop."

Miss La Rue stood up, and shook out her skirt.

"That's what I say; and it seems to me it would be more social if we had something to drink. You ain't too nice to partake of a social call, are you? Good! Then we'll have one. What's the hotelkeeper's name?"

"Timmons."

"Do you suppose he'd come up if I pounded on the floor?"

Miss Donovan slipped off the bed.

"I don't believe he is in the office. He went up the street just before dark. You light the lamp while I'll see if I can find the Chinaman out in the hall."

She closed the door behind her, strode noisily down the hall, then silently and swiftly retraced her steps and stooped silently down to where a crack yawned in the lower panel. That sense that is so much developed within the room and was applied to the wick of the lamp. The narrow opening gave only a glimpse of half the room—the wash-stand, the chair, and lower part of the bed. She saw Miss La Rue drop the match, then open her valise and go through it, swiftly. She found nothing, and turned to the wash-stand drawer. The latter was empty, and was instantly closed again, the girl staring about the room, as though at her wit's end. Suddenly she disappeared along the edge of the bed, beyond the radius of the crack in the door. What was it she was doing? Searching the bed, no doubt; seeking something hidden beneath the pillow or mattress.

Whatever her purpose, she was gone scarcely a moment, gliding silently back to the chair beside the window, with watchful eyes again fixed on the closed door. Miss Donovan smiled and straightened up, well satisfied with her ruse. It had served to demonstrate that the ex-chorus girl was far from being as calmly indifferent as she had assumed and it had made equally evident the fact that her visit had an object—the discovery of why Miss Donovan was in Keith. Doubtless she had made the call at Enright's suggestion. Very well, the lady was quite welcome to all the information obtained. Stella opened the door and the eyes of the two met.

"The Chinaman seems to have gone home," the mistress of the room said quietly. "At least he is not on this floor or in the office, and I could see nothing of Timmons anywhere."

"Then I suppose we don't drink," complained Miss La Rue. "Well, I might as well go to bed. There ain't much else to do in this jay town."

She got up and moved toward the door.

"If you're only here viewing the scenery, I guess you won't remain long."

"Not more than a day or so. I am planning a ride into the mountains before leaving," pleasantly. "I hope I shall see you again."

"You're quite liable to," an ugly curl to the lip, "maybe more than you'll want. Good-night."

Miss Donovan stood there motionless after the door closed behind her guest. She was conscious of the sting in those final words, the half-expressed threat, but the smile did not desert her lips. Her only thought was that the other was angry, irritated over her failure, her inability to make a report to her masters. She looked at the valise on the floor, and laughed outright, but as her eyes lifted once more she beheld her traveling suit draped over the head-board of the bed, and instantly the expression of her face changed. She had forgotten hanging it there. That must have been where the woman went when she disappeared. It was not to rummage the bed at all, but to hastily run through the pockets of her jacket. The girl swiftly crossed the room and flung coat and skirt onto the bed. She remembered now thrusting the telegram from Farriss into a pocket on the morning of its receipt. It was gone!

Her first thought was to search elsewhere, although she immediately realized the uselessness of any such attempt. The message had been in her pocket, as she recalled distinctly; she had fully intended destroying it at the same time she had torn up the letter of instruction, but failed to do so. Now it was in the hands of the La Rue woman, and would be shown to the others. It was some time before she could recall to memory the exact wording of the telegram, but finally it came to her bit by bit:

"If any clues, advise immediately. Wills digging hard. Letter of instruction follows.

"FARRISS."

There was no mention of names, yet these people could scarcely fail to recognize that this had reference to the Cavendish case. The thought of personal danger never once entered her mind. Timidity was not part of her nature, and she gave this phase of the matter no thought. But she must communicate with Westcott, tell him all that had occurred. She would send him a note the first thing in the morning.

Somewhat reassured by this reasoning, she was still seated there, staring out into the night, when Enright and Beaton returned. Stella heard the tread of horses' feet, before her eyes distinguished the party approaching, and she drew back cautiously. In the glow of the light she could perceive four men in saddle halt in front of the hotel, three of whom dismounted and entered the building, the fourth grasping the three riderless animals and leading them up the street. She heard the murmur of voices below and the heavy steps of the men as they came slowly up the stairs. Then a door opened creakingly and she caught the sound of a woman's voice.

"Is that you, Ned?"

"Sure; what are you doing up at this hour?"

"Never mind that. Who have you got with you?"

"Enright and Lacy—why?"

"I want you all to come in here a minute; don't make so much noise."

A voice or two grumbled, but feet shuffled along the bare floor and the door creaked again as it was carefully closed behind them. Stella opened her own door a crack and listened; the hall, lighted only by a single oil-lamp at the head of the stairs, was deserted and silent. She stole cautiously forward, but the voices in Miss La Rue's room were muffled and indistinct, not an audible word reaching her ears. The key was in the lock, shutting out all view of the interior. Well, what was the difference? She knew what was occurring within—the stolen telegram was being displayed, and discussed. That would not delay them long and it would never do for her to be discovered in the hall.

Convinced of the uselessness of remaining, she returned to her own room, closing and bolting the door.

This time she removed some of her clothing, and lay down on the bed, conscious of being exceedingly tired, yet in no degree sleepy. She rested there, with wide-open eyes, listening until the distant door creaked again, and she heard the footsteps of the men in the hall. They had not remained in the chorus girl's room long, nor was anything said outside to arouse her suspicions. Reassured, Miss Donovan snuggled down into her pillow, unable to distinguish where the men went, but satisfied they had sought their rooms. They would attempt nothing more that night, that she had better arm rest she could. It was not easy falling asleep, in spite of the silence, but at last she dropped off into a doze.

Suddenly some unusual noise aroused her, and she sat upright, unable for the moment to comprehend what had occurred. Then something tingled at the glass of her window, sharply distinct, as though a pebble had been tossed upward. Instantly she was upon her feet, and had accessed the room, her head thrust out. The light in the office had been extinguished, and the night was black, yet she could make out dimly the figure of a man close in against the side of the house, a mere hulking shadow. At the same instant he seemed to move slightly, and some missile grazed her face, and fell upon the floor, striking the rug with a dull thud. She drew back in alarm, yet immediately grasped the thought that this must be some secret message, some communication from Westcott.

Drawing down the torn curtain, she touched a match to the lamp and sought the intruding missile. It had rolled beneath the bed—a small stone with a bit of paper securely attached. The girl tore this open eagerly, her eyes searching the few lines.

"Must see you tonight. Have learned things, and am going away. Go down back stairs, and meet me at big cottonwood behind hotel; don't fail. J. W."

Her breath came fast as she read, and crunched the paper into the palm of her hand. She understood, and felt no hesitancy. Westcott had made discoveries so important he must communicate them at once and there was no other way. He dare not come to her openly at that hour. Well, she was not afraid—not of Jim Westcott. She paused in her hasty dressing, wondering at herself, dimly aware that a new feeling partly actuated her desire to meet the man again—a feeling thoroughly alien to the Cavendish mystery. She glanced into the cracked mirror and laughed, half ashamed at her eagerness, yet utterly unable to suppress the quickened beat of her pulse.

She was ready almost in a minute, and had blown out the lamp. She almost held her breath as she opened the door silently and crept out into the hall. Twenty feet down this passage ended in a door. This was unlocked, and yielded easily to the grasp of her hand. It opened upon a narrow platform, and she ventured forth. At the bottom she was in a gloom almost impenetrable, but her feet felt a cinder path and against the slightly lighter sky her eyes managed to distinguish the gaunt limbs of a tree not far distant, the only one visible and doubtless the cottonwood referred to in the note.

Shrinking there in the black shadow of the building she realized suddenly the terror of her position—the intense loneliness; the silence seemed to smite her. Still it was not far to the tree, and surely there could be no danger at this hour. If there had been Westcott would never have asked her to come. The very recurrence of his name gave her strength and courage.

It was a rough path, sandy, interspersed with small rocks, and led down into a hollow. There was a road on the opposite bank, which was so steep she had to grasp its outcropping roots in order to pull herself up.

Even after gaining footing she saw nothing of Westcott, heard no sound indicating his presence. Suddenly something moved to her right, and she shrank back against the tree, uncertain if the shapeless thing approaching was man or beast. He was almost upon her before she was sure; then her lips gave utterance to a little sob of relief.

"Oh! You frightened me so!"

The man stopped, scarcely a yard away, a dusky figure, but with face indistinguishable.

"Sorry to do that," he said, "but no noise, please."

She shrank back to the edge of the bank, conscious of the grip of a great fear.

"You—you are not Mr. Westcott?" she choked. "Who are you? What is it you want?"

"You've been playin' in a game what's none o' your business. Now I reckon it's the other party's turn to throw some cards. Thought yer was comin' out yere ter meet up with Jim Westcott, didn't yer?"

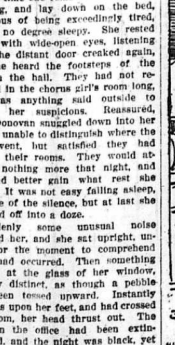
She made no answer, desperately seeking some means of escape, the full significance of her position clear before her.

"Got a nice little note from Jim," the fellow went on, "an' lost no time a-gittin' yere. Well, Westcott is not liable to be sendin' fer yer again very soon. What ther h——"

She had dashed forward, seeking to place the trunk of the tree between them, the unexpected movement so sudden, she avoided his grasp. But success was only for an instant. Another hand gripped her, hurling her back helplessly.

"You are some sweet little lady's man, Moore," snarled a new voice raspingly. "Now let me handle this business my own way. Go get that team turned around. I'll bring the girl. Come on now, miss, and the less you have to say the better."

She grasped at the bark, but the fellow wrenched her loose, forcing her



"Keep Still, You B—— Tiger Cat," He Hissed.

forward. "Keep still, you d—— tiger cat," he hissed, "or I'll quiet you for good."

"What is it you want of me? Who are you?"

"We'll discuss that later. Just now, move on—yes, straight ahead. You see that wagon over there? Well, that is where you are bound at present. Move on pronto."

She realized the completeness of the trap into which she had fallen, the futility of resistance. She was as helplessly in his power as though bound and gagged. Before them appeared the dim outline of a canvas-covered wagon silhouetted against the sky, to which was hitched a team of horses.

As they approached, the shapeless figures of two men appeared in the gloom, one at the head of the team and the other holding back the canvas top. Her guard gripped her arm, and peered about through the darkness.

"Ain't Ned here yet?"

"Yes, all right," answered a muffled voice to the left. "I just came out; here are the grips and other things."

"And about the note?"

"She wrote that, and pinned it on the pillow."

"Good, that will leave things in fine shape," he laughed. "I'd like to see Jim's face when he reads that, and the madder he gets the less he will know what to do."

"And you want us to stay?" asked the other doubtfully.

"Stay—of course; I am going to stay myself. It's the only way. Get aboard, you fellers. Good Lord, man, if we all disappeared at once they would know easy enough what had happened. Don't you believe Westcott is that kind of a fool. All ready, Joe?"

The man at the wagon muttered some response.

"Then up you go, miss; here, put your foot on the wheel; give her a lift, will you?"

Anxious to escape further indignities, and comprehending the uselessness of any further struggle, with a man on either side of her, Miss Donovan silently clambered into the wagon, and seated herself on a wide board, evidently arranged for that purpose. The fellow who had held back the top followed, and snuggled into the seat beside her. She noticed now he held a gun in his hand, which he deposited between his knees.

"All set?"

"Sure."

"Well, keep awake, Joe, and mind what I told yer. Now, Moore, up with you, and drive like h——; you must be in the bad lands before daylight."

A fellow clambered to the seat in front, his figure outlined against the sky, and picked up the reins.

"Whoa, there, now; quiet, Jerry. Did you say I was to take the ridge road?"

"You bet; it's all rock and will leave no trail. Take it easy and quiet until you are beyond Hennessey's ranch, and then give them the whip."

The next moment they were under way, slowly advancing through the darkness.

CHAPTER VIII.

In the Shoshone Desert.

Excited as she was, and frightened, the girl was still composed enough to grasp the nature of her surroundings, and she had time now, as the wagon rumbled forward, to think over all that had been said, and fit it into the circumstances.

What did they propose doing with her? The question caused her blood to run cold. That these people were desperate she had every reason to believe; they were battling for big stakes; not even murder had hitherto stood in their way. Why then, should they hesitate to take her life, if they actually deemed it necessary to the final success of their plans? She remembered what Beaton had said about her room—the condition in which it had been left. They had removed all her things, and left a note behind in womanly handwriting to explain her hurried departure. There was a master criminal mind, watchful of every detail, behind this conspiracy. He was guarding against every possibility of rescue.

The uncertainty, the fear engendered by her thought, the drear silence almost caused her to scream. But she conquered this.

The gray dawn came at last, spectral and ghastly, gradually yielding glimpse of the surroundings. They were traveling steadily south, the horses beginning to exhibit traces of weariness, yet still keeping up a dogged trot. All about extended a wild, desolate scene of rock and sand, bounded on every horizon by barren ridges. Nowhere was there slightest sign of life—no bird, no beast, no human even, crossed their path. All was dead, silent, stricken with desolation.

Stella stared about at it, and closed her eyes, unable to bear the sight; her head drooped wearily, every nerve aquiver even before the depressing scene outspread in every direction. Sikes, watching her slightest movement, seemed to sense the meaning of the action.

"Tired, gin't it?" he said expressively. "You know whar we are?"

"No; but I never before dreamed any spot could be so terrible."

"This is the Shoshone desert; that ain't nobody ever comes in yere 'cept'n we'uns in a while a prospector, maybe, or a band o' cattle rustlers. Even the Injuns keep out."

She lifted her eyes again, shuddering as they swept about over the dismal waste.

The sun rose a red ball of fire, coloring the ridges of sand, and painting the grotesque rocks with crimson streamers. In the shadow of a bald cliff the wagon was halted briefly, and the two men brought forth materials from within, making a hasty fire, and preparing breakfast. Water was given the team also, before the journey was resumed; while during the brief halt the girl was left to do as she pleased. Then they moved on again, surrounded by the same drear landscape, the very depression of it keeping them silent.

Cinemas.

How many cinema theatres are there in the world?

The United States heads the list with 18,000, followed by Germany with 3,731 and Russia with 3,500; Great Britain is fourth with 3,000. The total for Europe is 18,393, the numbers of cinemas in other countries being: France, 2,400; Italy, 2,200; Austria, 800; Belgium, 778; Scandinavia, 703; Poland, 300; Holland, 227; Hungary, 180; Spain, 156; Czecho-Slovakia, 123; Switzerland, 123; Jugo-Slavia, 117; Turkey, 32; and the Balkans, 22.

The continent of America boasts 20,450 cinemas, those not in the United States being distributed as follows: South America, 1,200; Canada, 750, and Central America, 500.

Africa, Asia, and Australia betwixt them have 1,161 cinemas, and the grand total for the world is 47,000.

GIVE THEM A SALT BOX

Pigs and Other Live Stock Require Mineral Food.

Farm Animals Must Have a Body Builder—A Good Mineral Mixture Suggested — Combatting Field Mice.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The feeds that we give our young animals are the body building materials, and are just as necessary to the young pig, calf, or colt as are bricks and boards to the carpenter engaged in building a house. House building and body-building are alike in that both depend upon the structural materials furnished. When we see a fine house we are at once impressed with the evidence that is before us, in good and abundant material supplied the workmen. When we see well-grown, fine and sleek calves and pigs we have the same thought—that abundant body-building material has been supplied. On the other hand when we observe a shack built of scrap lumber, or see a calf with its back up, pot bellied, under size, or a pig crippled and off its feet, we are at once struck with the thought that someone has not supplied the very necessary materials for body building or house building.

Need of Lime and Phosphorous.

Two materials that are necessary in growth and body building are lime and phosphorous. Young animals running with their dams on pasture will as a rule show no evidence of a shortage of these minerals in their development since the milk of their dams is adjusted to the mineral requirement of the young. But as soon as the young animals become dependent on the feeds given them by man their case is different, and they are frequently very much neglected, in that a proper selection of feeds is not made for them. A calf or pig that is shut up tight in a pen has no choice; it is entirely at the mercy of the owner or feeder. Should the feeds supply all the requirement of growth, then all is well and good. If the feeds do not supply the requirements, then development cannot take place. With animals confined in pens the mineral food shortage is usually pronounced, unless some special provision is made to supply such. The effect of its absence is shown in unthrifty, crippled or dwarf animals.

Results of Experiments.

In an experiment recently concluded, where two groups of pigs were being fed the same grain ration, a remarkable difference was noted in one group that received in addition to the grain ration free access to a mineral mixture or salt box containing the following essentials to growth: Lime, bone meal, rock salt, and charcoal. The presence of the salt box in the one pen during the 124 days of the feeding experiment gave an average gain of 132.5 pounds per pig, while the pigs in the pen in which there was no salt box gave an average gain of 69.5 pounds per pig in the 124 days. The presence or use of the salt box was accountable for a gain of 63.5 pounds per pig. If young animals are out on good grass they can generally get what minerals are required for their body development. But the confined animal gets only what you give it, and the giving is indicated by the condition of the animal. If the animal does not thrive your giving has been misdirected or stingy.

Watch Your Stock.

Look at the pigs and calves on your farm. Are they "off their feet," "up in the back," "stunted" or "scrubby"? If so, then take that look in the mirror when nobody is around and see the fellow responsible for the condition. If you recognize yourself as the stingy or neglectful feeder, proceed at once to the workshop and make a mineral-salt box. If it, and see that your young animals never want for the essential bone and muscle building elements. The pigs and calves will be more apt to thrive, and they will give you a better opinion of you.—L. Stevenson, Sec. Ontario Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

Combatting Field Mice.

Traps for field mice can be used only on limited areas. In the case of large fields recourse must be had to poisoned grain. One ounce of sulphate of strychnia dissolved by boiling in a pint of water and an equal quantity of cheap syrup added to poison half a bushel of wheat or corn. Cracked and crushed corn is better for this purpose than the uncrushed kernel. This grain should be soaked in the poisoned liquid several hours and then be allowed to dry. Grass growing about the base of a fruit tree encourages the presence of mice. It does also early mulching. Cover crops such as buckwheat, oats or clover may harbor mice. Snow about fruit trees should be tramped down occasionally to keep mice from working under it. These pests would be less numerous if neighboring swamp areas were drained and thorough ploughing and harrowing resorted to in cultivating crops. Hawks and owls, weasels, skunks and foxes destory large numbers of field mice.

The free use of an effective lice powder is always in order with poultry. A dustbath is very essential in ridding the fowls of lice. Whitewashing is an active agent in vermin. Use kerosene on the roosts and in the cracks to exterminate mites.

Mustard, cress, radish, lettuce, set onions and spinach are crops that can be grown in a hotbed.

Be sure that the snow is well trampled about the apple and plum trees. This will discourage mice from nesting near them.

Will Control the Borer.

The Ohio Farmer reports that the corn-borer has been found in noticeable numbers in only one county in Ohio, and even there it does not cause serious alarm. The Farmer further states that in the United States there is a natural enemy of the borer that its already destroying 90 per cent. of the eggs laid by this enemy of the corn crop.

If that statement is well founded, it contains more of hope for the eradication of a dangerous pest than there is in all the efforts of Government officials.

THE SHEEP INDUSTRY.

First Lamb Show Held In Prairie Province.

A most interesting account of a novel lamb show and sale held by the Dominion Live Stock Branch and the Manitoba Sheep Breeders' Association in co-operation at Arborg, Man., on September 5, is given in the Grain Growers' Guide. This, the first exclusive sheep fair and sale ever held in the Prairie Provinces, marked the culmination of the work done by the Dominion branch in promoting the sheep industry in the locality. The prize list, to which the live stock branch contributed $300, and private individuals and companies in the live stock trade $200, attracted a total entry of 815 lambs, of which 650 were sold after the show, the best of the breeding ewes shown being returned to the farms of their owners. The report of the sale says that "Owners seemed to be well satisfied with the prices received. Lambs sold from $5.50 to $8 per head. In the few weeks previous local drovers had been picking up lambs at other points between the lakes, equal in breeding and finish, and the highest price paid by them was $5.50."

"In 1915, the live stock branch established sheep breeding associations at Vidor, Framnes, Arborg, Bifrost and Geyser, all within a radius of a dozen miles of the central shipping point. Pure-bred rams were placed among the members on loan according to the provisions of the well-known scheme. As these rams lost their usefulness by reason of the maturity of their own daughters, they were passed round from one association to another. The live stock branch supervised the operations, sending men into the district to dock, castrate and dip. This past year 900 lambs were docked and castrated, and 2,200 sheep altogether were dipped.

"The Arborg district is low and badly in need of drainage, and on that account is not a natural sheep breeding area. However the bushy nature of the country makes improvement of farm stock and settlers are in need of just such lines of work to guarantee a sure annual income. Due to the demonstration of the profitableness of sheep, raising afforded by this promotion work the sheep population exceeds that of any other municipality in Manitoba with the exception of Dufferin."

Need Permits for Handing.

Federal permits are necessary in all cases for bird-banding work. The authorities are anxious to have as many collaborators as possible, but success depends largely on complete co-operation between officials and collaborators.

Provincial permits are required in many cases. Some officials issue them without charge to collaborators, when notified by the biological survey that the applicant has a federal permit. Others have taken the position that the federal permit is sufficient authority. Each operator should be informed as to the attitude of his provincial game officials and be prepared to co-operate with them at all times.

The Canadian Hog.

The Dominion Live Stock Commissioner states that Canada to-day has more nondescript hogs than she had ten years ago, and that the general lack of high quality is apparent in almost every province. In substantiation of this statement an estimate is made of the hogs that would probably grade as "select" for bacon purposes. In Ontario and Prince Edward Island the figures are from 25 to 40 per cent.; in Nova Scotia, from 30 to 35 per cent.; in Quebec, from 20 to 25 per cent.; in Saskatchewan, from 15 to 20 per cent., and in Alberta, from 10 to 15 per cent. This indicates pretty clearly the extent to which hogs are being bred to the bacon type in the several provinces.

Nicer and Safer Barley.

Charlottetown No. 80, a variety of barley that drops nearly all of its beards during harvesting time, originated at the Charlottetown Experiment Station as a result of selection from a locally grown barley known as Old Island No. 6. It is a good producer. Absence of awns greatly facilitates handling of the barley crop in harvesting and threshing, and makes the straw safe for feeding.

New Veterinary College.

The opening of the new Veterinary College at Guelph, Ont., took place on Tuesday morning. The building is now complete, and the classrooms and laboratories are being fitted with modern and up-to-date equipment to be ready for the opening season.

Milk drinking nations rule the world.

The commercial watermelon crop in the United States is estimated at $68,000 this year.

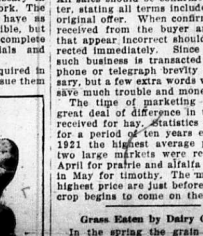
Lambs In Demand.

Owing to the extreme shortage of lamb supplies in the United States, the trade is largely of the opinion that the immediate result of the new duty will be stimulation of prices of lambs on the American market to a point where it will still continue to be profitable for Canadian exporters to ship lambs to the United States on the basis of the present prices obtaining in the Dominion. This statement was made in the course of an announcement by the Dominion Live Stock Branch of the Department of Agriculture on the effect of the United States tariff on the lamb market.

HANDLING HAY CROPS.

Different Methods Used In Different Sections of Country.

The merits of the consignment method and the straight-sales method of marketing hay are open to controversy. Some farmers prefer one, some the other. The consignment method consists in shipping to brokers or commission merchants, who act as the shipper's representative in selling his hay on the market. By the straight-sales method the shipper sells his hay at a fixed price, either at the point of shipment or point of destination at a certain specified time. The shipper must consider conditions and decide which method is the more advantageous to use, for the method that may be advantageous one week may be not at all profitable the next. It is important to know the preferences of the various markets, for it is the buyer's preference that prevails. In some markets buyers often prefer large five or six-wire bales weighing from 175 to 215 pounds.



Hay Loader In Operation.

In the Central Western markets the 17 by 22-inch bale is probably the most generally used, and on the Pacific Coast both this size and the large bale prevail almost exclusively.

To avoid differences between buyer and seller it is suggested that a few simple rules be kept in mind. The seller should state clearly all necessary factors, including quality and quantity of hay, time at or within which shipment can be made, routing, rates, price, and terms of payment. All sales should be confirmed by letter, stating all terms included in the original offer. When confirmation is received from the buyer any items that appear incorrect should be corrected immediately. Since much of such business is transacted by telephone or telegraph brevity is necessary, but a few extra words will often save much trouble and misunderstanding.

The time of marketing makes a great deal of difference in the price received for hay. Statistics compiled for a period of ten years ending in 1921 the highest average prices at two large markets were reached in April for prairie and alfalfa hay, and in May for timothy. The months of highest price are just before the new crop begins to come on the market.

Grass Eaten by Dairy Cow.

In the spring the grain is often taken from a cow's ration and she is turned on pasture. This practice is all right if she can crop 100 pounds of green grass daily. She requires that much grass as if she weighs 1,000 pounds and is giving three gallons of milk a day. Many cows do not have good pasture, and consequently are very poor in the summer, when they are stimulated to a large production by a young calf and succulent grass.

I have a plot which is a mat of a pile of grass that is 54 inches long, 36 inches wide and 18 inches high. It takes this much grass to weigh 100 pounds. A gunny-sack crammed full of green grass will hold approximately 30 pounds of it. To find how much pasture it would take to yield 100 pounds of grass, on May 13 I clipped several plots, and found that it took 400 square feet of orchard grass that is two per cent. thick, clipped three inches from the ground to yield 100 pounds of grass. It took 800 square feet of bluegrass 15 inches tall to yield that amount. In other words, a cow must keep pretty busy, and have good pasture to crop the required amount of this green, watery food. It will often pay to continue to feed cows a substantial grain ration during the summer when they are on average pasture. The amount of grain to be fed will be determined by the value and the quantity and richness of the milk that they yield.—J. J. Hooper, in Breeder's Gazette.

Prefer a Milder Butter.

The Dominion Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, J. A. Ruddick, has just returned from a visit to Great Britain. In noting the arrival at Liverpool of the largest single shipload of butter ever sent from this country, namely, 9,000 boxes, Mr. Ruddick says that the chief complaint in England regarding Canadian butter is that it is over-salted. The people over there like their butter mild. As the makers cannot tell whether their butter is for export or home consumption, it is urged as a solution of the difficulty that Canadian consumers be led to cultivate a taste for milder-salted butter than they have been accustomed to. The commissioner says that large quantities of Canadian butter of the right type would be welcomed on the Old Country markets. At present New Zealand pretty well dominates the field in the matter of butter exports to Britain, although Canada's export for July showed a splendid increase compared with the corresponding month in 1920 and 1921.

Dehorning In a Nutshell.

Dehorning cattle (1) improves their appearance and gives more evenness to sale lots; (2) makes them quieter, feed better, and show larger gains at less cost; (3) enables more to be loaded in cars and to ship more satisfactorily.

There are two important marketing facts born of long experience: (1) all buyers, feeders, killers, shippers and exporters demand dehorned cattle; (2) buyers discount horned cattle as compared to dehorned cattle.

A New Strawberry.

Over three hundred boxes of strawberries have been picked by R. A. McCluskey, Calgary off his patch, which is 75 x 100 feet. Mr. McCluskey has a new berry, which averages 24 berries to the stalk.

"ROBY" O'CONNOR.

Sinn Fein "Die-Hard" Who Is Known In Alberta.

In remote parts of northern Alberta the personnel of a small surveying camp was thrown into a state of excitement in the fall of 1914, when news finally percolated that a great war had started in Europe. Some of the men said they wouldn't mind taking part; one or two intimated that if the conflict lasted long enough, and they didn't happen to strike a good job on returning to civilisation, they would certainly enlist.

One man, a young engineer, tendered his resignation on the spot. He was popular with his fellows, because of his curt, authoritative manner, his brooding, almost surly, habits, and his general aloofness from the few pleasures of the camp.

"Why, O'Connor," said the chief, in surprise, "what's the idea of you wanting to enlist. You're the last man I'd have expected to see going out to fight for England."

"I'm not going to fight for England, I'm going out to fight England," snapped back the engineer. "England's extremity is Ireland's opportunity. You'll hear of me anon."

And then, as fast as train and boat could carry him, Rory O'Connor, the most romantic figure in the recent history of Ireland, covered the distance back to his native land, and plunged with characteristic energy into the struggle.

Accounts of the men who worked with him in Alberta, Roderick O'Connor has few of the traits of the typical Irishman. A boisterous smile, and then it is not a pleasant smile, but almost a sneer. Always his mind seems to dwell on the wrongs of centuries past, and he is obsessed with the idea of revenge. He never disguised that he was a bitter and uncompromising enemy of Great Britain.

For eighteen months or so after he returned to Ireland, not much was heard of "Rory" O'Connor, but he was constantly before the public in the Easter rebellion of 1916. Taken prisoner with a number of fellow-rebels, "Roby" was kept in jail for a time, then released under a general amnesty. Immediately he repaid this clemency by organizing a campaign of open warfare which recommended that the same form be adopted in the United States, where there was much confusion between the old Fenian agencies.

Mr. Stewart, in a word, was more than a statistician; he looked behind the facts, and he was able to build constructively on what they taught him.

Birds at School.

Young birds have their lessons to learn, just as young children do. Most of them have very little notion of flying until their parents give them some lessons in the art. Watch, say, a young thrush which has just come out of the nest. He holds tightly to his perch on a twig, the while his mother flutters about him, ever and anon giving him a call to make him venture farther. Until he has gained confidence in himself he has to be harried from branch to branch.

Go into the garden when the fledglings are beginning to move out of their nests, and hear the singing lessons that are going on.

Listen to the same few notes being sounded over and over again. Then, if your patience is not exhausted, you will hear a weak imitation piped out. The old birds may be seen sitting near the youngsters patiently repeating the notes, until, a few at a time, the babies pick them up.

Later on you may hear the song being practiced. If you know anything about birds' songs you can easily tell the difference between the halting song of the learner and the finished trills of the parent bird.

Because a bird is a thrush or a sinnet, it need not necessarily sing the song peculiar to those birds. Have the eggs hatched in another bird's nest, where the babies will not hear their natural song, and the foster-mother will soon teach them a passable imitation of her own song.

Moon Haloes Mean Rain.

At this time of the year the moon, when riding high in the heavens, is often seen surrounded by a perfect circle of soft light. Sometimes the ring of light is quite small and lies quite close to the moon's edge, but on other occasions it is enormous, so big in fact that sixty moons placed side by side would be only just enough to encircle it.

If you hold out a hand at arm's length between your eye and the moon, how many fingers do you think will be covered by the ring? Try it and see; you will be surprised to find that the tip of your little finger is quite enough to cover even the biggest of haloes. But to speak one of these great rings you will need all the fingers of both hands separated to their fullest extent.

Weather prophets will tell you that rings round the moon mean a change in the weather. They are quite right, for the presence of the ring, as the ring is called, always means that great clouds are floating in the air at least 20,000 feet above the surface of the earth.

Under the upper layers of the atmosphere are charged with moisture, rain clouds are sure to form before very long, and soon a steady downpour will be falling on the earth below.

LOSS TO CANADA.

Bryce M. Stewart Did Important Work as Statistician.

By many people the Civil Service is often criticised for its routine character, for the lack of initiative allowed to or used by its members. Now and again one of them stands out for his ability to escape from the enmeshing red tape.

One of these was Bryce M. Stewart, who has been Director of Employment Services at Ottawa for the past four years. Mr. Stewart has accepted an important appointment in the United States, and the Dominion service is much the poorer. He will be director of employment service for the United Garment Workers of America, one of the strongest unions on the continent, with headquarters at Chicago.

The red-haired young Scottish-Canadian, with a modesty which makes his ability shine all the greater, has been a powerful force in an important phase of reconstruction war troubles. He had graduated from Queen's and done sociological work in British Columbia before he was appointed in 1914 to be assistant editor of the Labor Gazette. A little later, when R. H. Coats, another "live wire" in the service, became head of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Mr. Stewart succeeded to the editorship. In 1918, when the employment service was created for sorting out the workers of the country and getting them easily where most work was to be found, Mr. Stewart became Director of Employment Services, and it was there that his greatest work was done.

He was primarily responsible for the establishment of the Federal system of employment offices, receiving in working it out valuable co-operation from Dr. W. A. Riddell, then head of employment offices in Ontario and now in Geneva, and from F. M. Molloy, in charge of employment offices in Saskatchewan. This system has resulted not only in smooth-working co-operation between the provinces and the Dominion, which was indispensable, but has proved to be an effective instrument for distributing employment among Federal agencies all the year round, rather than in harvest season alone. So well organized was the system that, after careful investigation by a committee of the Senate, it was recommended that the same form be adopted in the United States, where there was much confusion between state and Federal agencies.

Mr. Stewart, in a word, was more than a statistician; he looked behind the facts, and he was able to build constructively on what they taught him.

Young birds are then encouraged to fly a little farther afield, and the parents are always on the alert to warn them of danger. Should the fledgling be caught by a cat, or other enemy, the parent birds will make a great fuss, and will even attack the foe.

Buried on Mountain Tops.

Before Dr. Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, died, he selected the place where he wished to be buried. He now lies on the lonely top of Mt. Beinn Bhreagh, in Nova Scotia.

But he is not the only man who has been buried on a hill-top. Another lonely and elevated grave is that of Gen. Colley, on the summit of Majuba Hill, where his little band was surprised by Boers and almost annihilated. Near by is a cairn of stones bearing the simple words, "Here Colley Fell."

An American poet who styled himself "The Poet of the Sierras" is buried on the top of one of the highest of the Rocky Mountains. He raised his own monumental pile close to the shack where he spent many years of his life.

Cecil Rhodes, the founder of Rhodesia, is buried on the top of a hill in South Africa called Matoppo. It is said that there, in his earlier days, he used to climb and dream of the future of the vast country spread at his feet, and that even then he determined that that should be his burial place.

But the most famous hill-top shrine is that of Robert Louis Stevenson in Samoa, where he went in search of health. It was his wish to be buried on the hill-top close to his house, and his faithful friends were carried by his beloved Samoans. He also wrote his own epitaph, which is certainly one of the most beautiful ever penned:

"Under the wide and starry sky dig the grave and let me lie.
Glad did I live and gladly die, and
I laid me down with a will.
This be the verse you 'grave for me;
here he lies where he longed to be.
Home is the sailor, home from the sea, and the hunter home from the hill."

LIME FOR CLOVER.

Ontario Agricultural College Will Experiment In Every County.

In many parts of Ontario farmers have experienced financial losses and serious disarrangement of the rotation of crops because of the failure to secure a good catch of clover. In many cases this is doubtless due to an acid condition of the soil. To gather some definite information on this point the Department of Agriculture have placed three experiments with lime in each of the following counties: Welland, Haldimand, Norfolk, Elgin, Wentworth, Lincoln and Brant. The lime was applied in the form of ground limestone rock on a half-acre plot at the rate of two tons per acre. The ground was sown with fall wheat and seeded with clover. It is not expected that the lime will have much effect upon the crop of wheat but the point of special interest will be to see its influence on the following crop of clover. In conjunction with this experiment acid phosphate at the rate of 400 lbs. per acre was applied to the second plot in addition to the crushed limestone, the point of interest being to see what influence phosphate and lime have on the yield of wheat and the stand of clover.

Mixed fertilizers of the 2-8-2 type are commonly recommended for the wheat crop and another plot was added to the experiment in which 200 lbs. of this type of fertilizer was applied. The experiment would, therefore, consist of—

Plot (1) Check.

Plot (2) Crushed limestone applied at the rate of two tons per acre.

Plot (3) Limestone at the same rate with the addition of acid phosphate at the rate of 400 lbs. per acre.

Plot (4) 200 lbs. 2-8-2 type of mixed fertilizer.

It is the intention to extend this experimental work until all the counties of Ontario have been included.

MORE YARDS IN FALL GOWNS

Fashion's Latest Edict Demands Greater Yardage in Dresses That Are Up-to-Date.

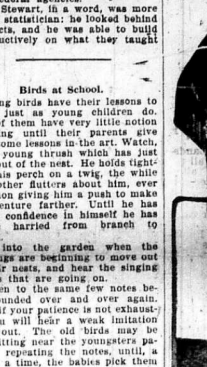
It's that period of the twelve-month when Fashion can afford to chuckle up her sleeve and keep us guessing, unless a fashion authority. In a word it is the openings of the Paris couturiers to which so many of America's floating population have been drifting.

To be sure, any number of mysterious hints have leaked out and some of the couturiers have gone so far as to show a few advance models which act as straws in the whirlpool of rumor. Even after the curtain has been raised on all of these openings there are no certainties to guide us. We shall know what Cheruit, what Callot, what Poiret and all the others are advocating, but only time can determine their fate, for it is the well-dressed woman who is the final court of appeal and her decision will not be made for many weeks yet.

There's one fact that appears to be proved conclusively and that is that we shall have to buy more material this fall for our dresses. You know we have been skimping ourselves very successfully, for three yards have been known to make a dress that passed the board of censors. But with the increased length of skirt here even a moment stops at a length no higher than eight inches from the floor for the street—the circular swirls, the drapery and the plaits, we shall have to count on one, two and even three yards more, for the length alone demands an extra yard. Fortunately we shall not have to consider so much yardage for the sleeves, for they are again moulding the arm, but they do extend well down over the hand.

But if we must buy more material we can economize a little on our combinations for the popularity of the short jackets in Paris has brought about skirts and dresses contrasting in fabric with outer garment—and a short one at that. And we can combine two or more materials so that the gown of to-day can be transformed into the up-to-the-minute frock by a very little new material.

CAPELIKE SLEEVES, FEATURE



This frock of dark blue georgette relies upon its cape-like sleeves and beaded panels for its style.

SOME FASHIONS IN BLOUSES

Tailored Garments in High Favor; Hip Length and Longer Models Are Shown.

The outdoor or tailored blouse is unquestionably the favorite. Usually hip length is the length preferred, although some a little more than hip length are shown.

Among the new dressy blouses recently seen one gorgeously embroidered in Chinese designs was noted. The motifs were rather large and done in vivid colors and the crepe de chine background, the blouse being of this material.

Middies are leading their own in the lineup of blouses. Regulation middy styles are used for garments made of such materials as checked or striped tub silks, plain and dyed pongee, and even checked ginghams and flannels, plain color fabric in contrasting color usually supplying the trimming touch.

A blue and white checked silk middy seen recently was trimmed with narrow bands of plain white and plain blue, and a blue Windsor tie finished the collar.

A white voile blouse, made middy style but worn tucked in under the skirt, was finished with hemstitched collar and cuffs of blue linen, and a natural pongee model found green satin bands and then an attractive finish.

MODES OF THE MOMENT

One of the most movements is to own a thick and thin frock, which when combined make a single costume of distinction and charm.

The ribbon hat that collapsed in the hand and carried in an envelope was a plaything that influenced the making of motor hats for different brands of weather.

It is not possible to persuade women to disconnect spool and plaid skirts, so the combination goes merrily on. Short jackets are now substituted for sweaters.

Although women are giving up red to some extent little boys are adopting it as a way to make themselves gay and conspicuous in the general hurst of color.

White and brown is one of the new combinations that well dressed women have launched. The older generation remembers that the same thing was popular in the 1880 fashions.

One garment placed over another is a fashion from the Orient and it catches the fancy of the dressmakers today as it gives them a chance to combine white with a darker color.

THE LARGE FLOATING VEILS

Latest Face Coverings Are Winsome as Well as Expensive; Great Art in Wearing Them.

The latest floating veils are very lovely and amazingly expensive. They have embroidered borders done entirely by hand, and as often as not small beads are mingled with metallic threads and soft silk. The border must not be at all heavy, but the idea is that it should look exceedingly rich —and uncommon.

Multi-colored beads of miniature size are used for embroideries of this genre, and they are specially effective when the veil is thrown over a perfectly simple black and white hat. Everything depends on how the veil is worn. It must give the impression of extreme carelessness; thrown on "anyhow," but there is a great art in wearing a large floating veil—effectively.

Shaughnessy Bark Had No Bite.

Max Ehos, United States press representative of the Canadian Pacific Railway, left Vancouver this summer for China, Japan and the Philippines. During his tour, which will last several months, he will write a series of Sunday feature travel stories and short news articles and interview prominent passengers in the Orient.

Before he sailed, while doing star reporting for a Vancouver paper, he persisted, despite several rebuffs, in endeavoring to secure an interview with Lord Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, whose train he "jumped." Finally, the railroad president submitted to being interviewed and Max was well pleased with the young reporter's work that he was engaged by the railway as United States press representative, with New York as his home office.

Judgment by Lot.

There still exists, if we are to believe the great Canadian explorer, Duguld Campbell, among several peoples of Central and West Africa, the judgment by lot, similar in spirit to that which was practiced in Europe in the middle ages. In West Africa any person suspected of an offence has for a certain time to undergo waters infested with crocodiles. If he comes out of the ordeal without injury, and this happens rarely, he is proclaimed innocent. In central Africa the accused person has to smoke an enormous pipe filled with tobacco and red peppers. If he succeeds in smoking the contents of the pipe without spitting once, and this, too, happens very rarely, he is freed of all suspicion.

WELCOME, WINTRY WINDS ?

What did you do with your summer's dough ?
It's gone ; and you hate to tell.
Soon we'll have both hail and snow,
It sure would make one yell.
But ! we should worry ! let it come,
The wintry winds we'll greet,
For we were shod at the Hospital
And we shall have dry feet.
Hog ! Dog ! nor devil, do we fear,
For our understanding's good ;
Our sox are dry, our feet are glad,
We did as wise fools should.

NEW BOOKS AT THE LIBRARY

Now that the long evenings are here again people are asking themselves the question "What Shall I Read ?" Cut out this list of new books just fresh from the press and refer to it when in doubt.

Talks to Mothers—A helpful book on child-training, by a leading authority—Lucy Wheelock.

John Burroughs Talks—A series of visits with America's greatest naturalist.

The Jews—By Hilaire Belloc. Anything written by this author is sure to be readable, and this is pronounced the finest book of his career.

Indian Legends of Vancouver Island. This book is purely Canadian and ought to please old and young.

History of the Latin American Nations—This book deals with the subject from the age of the Incas to the present day and is pronounced a notable piece of historical writing.

The Northward Course of Empire—By Vilhjalmur Stefanson, illustrated from photographs. In this interesting volume the author challenges our preconceived notions about the Arctic regions.

With Gun and Rod in Canada—A book that all good sportsmen will want to read, and others ought to read.

Later English Poems—A volume of the choisest selections of English poetry, written in the 20th century.

The Drama of Life—Contains wisdom and counsel respecting the every day problems of life.

My Northern Treasure—If you are afflicted with the blues just get this book and accompany the author on a riotously funny expedition to the north pole.

Around the World in Ten Days—An exciting and romantic adventure, yet within the bounds of possible achievement.

How to Sell at Retail—A book that every salesman should read.

What I Saw in America—By G. K. Chesterton.

My Discovery of England—By Stephen Leacock. The titles and the names of the authors of these two books are all the advertising they require. They are both in great demand.

Radio for Amateurs—Tells all about how to use, make and install wireless telephone and telegraph instruments.

Radio Simplified—Is along the same lines but a little more technical and advanced.

The United States and Canada—By Geo. M. Strong. This volume contains Professor Wrong's lectures on the Bennett Foundation at Wesleyan University.

Europe in Convalescence—Is just the book to read in order to understand the situation in Europe.

Dog Heroes of Many Lands—A good story book, that's all ; yet most interesting ; for all the stories about our devoted friend are true.

Behind the Mirrors—A companion book to the Mirrors of Washington.

The Russian Story Book—Is precisely what it professes to be. It opens a new vista in stories for the young.

From Gladstone to Lloyd George—An excellent contemporaneous history of the great men of England.

The above list contains something for the most exacting taste. What nicer gift could be given to a friend than a membership ticket in the library. The reading of one good book is often ample satisfaction for the membership fee of one dollar.

20 WINTER COATS ON SALE FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 10TH AND 11TH REDUCTIONS OF 20 PER CENT.

These 20 choice model coats should appeal to every prospective coat buyer. They should appeal because they are beautifully styled from the season's most fashionable materials, such as Duvette, Normandy, Velour and Tweed.

They invariably feature the long, slender silhouette, occasionally a loose back, but always with a large sleeve, which either narrows in at the cuff, or flares wider into a graceful bell sleeve.

These coats, in most instances, are trimmed with fur such as Beaverene, Canadian Beaver, Coon, or Wolf on the collar. Sometimes the same fur is found on the cuff.

Embroidery, in its most elegant interpretation, is employed on several coats, while silk stitching, fancy buttons and belts, ornament others. The linings are particularly good and unusually handsome.

DOUBLE FACED BELGIAN VELOUR

For several years homeseekers have been inquiring for double faced Velours, all without avail. We expect to have in stock in a few days a complete range of these goods. 50 inches wide, at $5.50 per yard. Ideal materials for portieres.

EASTERN KLING KLOSE WINTER CAPS FOR MEN AND BOYS

There has never been an inside band comparable to the Eastern Kling Klose. It does not bulge out at the ears just when you need the protection. On the contrary it clings close to the ears and protects them from the cold blasts. The winds may howl and the mercury fall but the Kling Klose Cap protects them all. New patterns. Prices considerably lower than last season.

Wear a Kling Klose this winter.

MEN'S HEAVY WORK SHIRTS

One line to which we would call your particular attention. It is a brushed cotton, extra heavy in weight, and one of the best wearing shirts which we have ever sold. A wonderful seller last season, and an equally wonderful seller so far this season.. Sizes from 14½ to 17½. Priced at $1.75 each.

MEN'S PURE WOOL BOTANY HOSE

Colors Black, Sovat, Blue Heather, and Heather. A wonderful hose at a special price. Our best selling lines to-day. 75c. pair, or 3 pairs for $2.00.

MEN'S COAT SWEATERS

We are showing a splendid coat sweater, without collar, this season at a very special price. Not all wool, but will give you all kinds of wear. The ideal garment. Colors are Plain Camel, Plain Grey, and Plain Black.

Priced at $2.65 each.

CHILDREN'S TOQUE SETTS

Composed of Toque and Scarf. Three very pretty combinations. Seal Brown and Purple, Saxe, Blue, and Grey Camel and Mid Blue. Priced at $1.50 sett.
